PREFACE

THE cost of publishing this volume as well as of the Facsimile volume accompanying it has been paid from the income of the Freer Research and Publication Fund.

The Papyrus of the Minor Prophets in the Freer Collection has been edited by Mr. Sanders, but for the opportunity to use unpublished material on the different Versions in Coptic he is under special obligation to Professor Schmidt. The editor is also indebted to Professor Rahlfs and the Septuaginta-Unternehmen in Göttingen for the permission to use the extensive apparatus gathered there, to Professor Lake and Harvard University for the loan of photographs of Septuagint manuscripts, to Mr. A. M. Todd of Kalamazoo for the loan of his copy of the Complutensian Polyglot, and to the Vatican Library, the Staatsbibliothek in Berlin, the Bibliothèque Nationale, the Library of the Escorial, and the Royal Library in Turin.

The publication of the Berlin Papyrus of Genesis has been made by both editors, yet with such division of work that Mr. Schmidt takes the final responsibility for the history of the manuscript and for the reprint of the text in so far as it is preserved in the Papyrus, while Mr. Sanders assumes responsibility for the remainder of the Introduction, for the filling out of the lacunae in the text, and for the Notes. This is however only a division of responsibility and the work of neither editor should be considered confined to the field of his allotment.

AN EXPLANATION

THE Berlin Papyrus of Genesis was made use of to the fullest extent in the text of the edition of Genesis by Professor Rahlfs, which appeared in 1926, and even an extensive description given in the Introduction, p. 20ff. This was made possible by the use of photographs obtained in the following manner.

In 1923 complete photographs of the Papyrus had been made for Mr. Sanders at his expense and also the negatives were included for use in making the Facsimile. After the first draft of the text had been completed by him in 1924, a second set of prints was made from the negatives and sent to Professor Rahlfs at his request, but without the knowledge or consent of Professor Schmidt. This seemed to Mr. Sanders only a due return for the kindness with which the entire Septuagint apparatus at Göttingen had been placed at his service by Professor Rahlfs for use in the edition of the Papyrus of the Minor Prophets. No request was made for the privilege of prior publication and at that time the publication of the edition of the Septuagint by Rahlfs seemed financially impossible in Germany. Mr. Sanders also believed that he could rely on the fairness of Professor Rahlfs and that the special edition of the Berlin Genesis would appear within a short time.

Unfortunately our edition was considerably delayed through the union with the Minor Prophets, to which study extensive additions were made on the Coptic side from material obtained by Professor Schmidt, and through other unexpected hindrances both to editors and printers. Yet in spite of this delay the publication of the Rahlfs' Genesis was quite as surprising to Mr. Sanders as to his co-editor, for no announcement had been made to him by Professor Rahlfs of the anticipated publication and still less had permission been asked to make use of the photographs in a prior publication.

Furthermore scholars can hardly feel under special obligation for the prior publication of the Rahlfs' edition, since the text of the Papyrus has been very hastily and incompletely reproduced, as a comparison of the two publications will easily show. In the case of so old and fragmentary a papyrus photographs alone do not suffice and Professor Rahlfs should in his own interest have awaited the complete publication. Neither had he personally any sufficient cause to complain of the inaccessibility of the evidence of the Berlin Genesis in spite of the long delay in its publication, for in 1908 he was offered the chance of joining with Professor Schmidt in an edition of this important Papyrus, but refused, though he had occasioned the offer by the request that the publication be entrusted to him.

On the other hand Professor Schmidt can hardly be blamed for wishing to share in the study of a manuscript which he had purchased. So his copy of the text of the Papyrus remained unused, as other publications and travels kept him employed until the outbreak of the World War, which caused the abandonment of all hope of an early publication. He was accordingly most pleased in 1922, when he learned of the projected publication of the Papyrus of the Minor Prophets by the University of Michigan, as this presented the opportunity of publishing the Berlin Genesis under the same auspices and would at the same time provide for the heavy cost of printing and reproduction.

Professor Rahlfs is therefore in error in his Introduction, p. 21, when he states that Professor Schmidt had at first wished to publish the Papyrus himself — a plan that had never existed — and that he had later entrusted this task to Professor Sanders. Such a publication was at no time under consideration, and Professor Rahlfs must have known from conversation with Mr. Sanders that the two editors were to carry out the work in common. There is accordingly no foundation for the later reproach, that Professor Schmidt had entrusted to an American a publication, which should naturally have fallen to the Septuaginta-Unternehmen.

THE MINOR PROPHETS IN THE FREER COLLECTION

I. HISTORY OF THE MANUSCRIPT

THE Washington Manuscript of the Minor Prophets (Greek MS V¹ in the Freer Collection of the Smithsonian Institution) was bought in Cairo in 1916 from Maurice Nahman. It formed a part of a purchase of manuscripts, chiefly Coptic, which was made by Dr. David L. Askren, of Medînet el-Fayoum, for Mr. Charles L. Freer and the J. Pierpont Morgan Library. The draft sent in payment was lost on a steamer which was torpedoed in the Mediterranean; and on account of the hazardous state of transportation all the manuscripts were packed in a large tin box, which was sealed by the American consul and placed in the vault of a bank in Cairo.

There the manuscripts remained till the early spring of 1920, when the work of the first Near East Expedition of the University of Michigan brought Francis W. Kelsey to Cairo. The box containing the manuscripts was received and unpacked by him. On account of the extremely fragile condition of the papyrus of the Minor Prophets, however, he thought it best to refrain from disturbing the fragments, and showed them only to Professor Bernard Grenfell, who happened to be in Cairo and opened them up only enough to identify the contents. Mr. Kelsey took all the manuscripts immediately to Rome. Here the Coptic MSS, which belonged with the important collection acquired by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan in 1911, were delivered to Professor H. Hyvernat, and the papyrus of the Minor Prophets was forwarded by the American Embassy to the Library of the University of Michigan.

At the time of purchase the fragments of the papyrus were packed in cotton in two small boxes, and these were sent to the United States without repacking. They were received at the Library of the University of Michigan in May, 1920, and were later opened by me in the presence of the Librarian, William Warner Bishop. We merely assured ourselves that the fragments had come through without damage and closed the boxes again and placed them in the Library vault. It was thought best not to remove the fragile fragments from their original packing until we should be prepared to photograph each fragment upon its separation from the mass and make the best possible provision for permanent preservation.

As temporary retainers for the fragments we took sheets of blotting paper, 18 by 24 inches, and folded them in the middle. Sheets of glass 10 by 18 inches were provided both to support the folder and to cover the fragment or fragments within the folder. Large trays were secured on which several folders could be packed and carried away to the vault after the fragments had been placed within and photographed.

During November, 1920, the still cohering remnants of a papyrus book (Plate I) were separated into 28 fragments, each forming approximately three fourths of a leaf. It was not necessary to use moisture in order to separate the leaves, though they cohered considerably, especially on the decayed edges. The exposure of the papyrus to moist air had a slight tendency to make the leaves separate and curl at the edge. In separating the leaves a long, thin-bladed knife was inserted and the top leaf gradually raised along the edge. As the knife moved farther under the leaf a thin piece of card-board was pushed in behind it to serve as a support to the separated portion. In spite of the very fragile character of the papyrus, it was possible to raise without material damage each of the 28 leaves and to place them in the prepared folders. As soon as a leaf was laid in its folder, a sheet of glass of suitable size was placed over it, and the upper side of the leaf was photographed through the glass. Then the glass was removed; the folder of blotting paper was closed and sheets of glass were placed both under and above it. When these were pressed together, the papyrus in the blotter was held in place and the folder could be turned over, thus making it possible to photograph the under side of the leaf. Complete notation of leaf number, distinction of sides, position of fragments, etc. was made on the outside of the folders.¹

¹ The leaves were numbered as taken off, 1 to 28, beginning in Malachi. The addition of one leaf at the end and five including fragments at the beginning causes facsimile pp. 65-66 to correspond to original leaf 1 and pp. 11-12 to former leaf 28.

PLATE I

FIRST APPEARANCE OF THE 28 PAPYRUS LEAVES.

When these 28 leaves were removed the bottom of the box was found full of small fragments (Plate II). The second box was also opened and found to contain similar fragments (Plate III). Photographing was abandoned at this point, as no arrangements had been made for preserving the small fragments.

At the meeting of the Archaeological Institute of America, in December, 1920, a preliminary report was made on the basis of the 28 leaves photographed, and a resumé of this report appeared in the Harvard Theological Review for April 1921 (vol. XIV, pp. 181-187). There I inferred from the inverted order of leaves 14 and 15 and the turning over of leaves 20 and 21, that there could have been no binding in ancient times. In this conclusion I relied on the statement that the leaves had not been disturbed, although leaves 14 and 15 seemed to have been separated from the mass at some time previous to my work. I did not however at first place much weight on this fact, as none of the leaves cohered to their neighbors very strongly.

Early in 1921 a special room in the University Library was set aside for my use, neither janitor nor watchman being able to enter. It was determined to continue with the system of blotters with glass covering the papyrus and to arrange the small fragments as far as possible in their original leaves before again photographing. It was immediately discovered that the second box contained fragments of the tops of the 28 leaves already separated and photographed. It was evident that some sharp instrument, as a spade, had cut through the MS while it was still embedded in the sand, and the tops of all the leaves had been taken out first and thereafter kept in a separate box after being separated from dirt. The finders had then carefully removed the sand from around the remainder of the MS and lifted out intact the mass of unbroken leaves. The smaller fragments were then gathered up and probably the surrounding dirt sifted for further fragments. All of these were put in the bottom of the larger box, naturally on cotton, and then the larger fragments laid on these.

Among the fragments from the tops of the leaves were found three clusters of 7, 4, and 3 leaves each. This assisted in locating these fragments. Also the four-leaf cluster still retained the binding edge, so as to form two double-leaf fragments and in the middle of these was a piece of the original binding thread. There was thus preserved the middle of an original quire. On locating the fragments with their respective leaves it was found that they belonged to leaves 13 to 16, but that here the order was 13, 15, 14, 16. This is the correct order to correspond with the text, so that we are now certain that the finders accidentally or intentionally opened the mass of large fragments and took out leaves 14 and 15, the middle of the mass, and then returned them to the MS at the same place but with inverted order. My original assumption that the MS was made up of a mass of separate leaves was thus disproved and it only remained to explain the reversal of sides in the leaves 20 and 21. No additional evidence was gained from the tops of these, so we can not determine whether the turning took place before the burial of the MS or was due to the finders. What little evidence we have favors assigning the change to ancient times, for leaves 20 and 21 cohered to each other and to their neighbors quite as firmly as any other leaves. Yet we must remember that the MS had been closely packed and in a vault for four years after it was sold to our representative. If the change took place in ancient times, these two leaves must have been torn loose from the binding while the book was still in use.

By the aid of the concordance all the larger fragments were readily placed with their appropriate leaves, the two double-leaf fragments being cut apart on the binding edge after the exact order had been noted. The smaller the fragments the more difficult it was to locate them. Fragments were found belonging to the four leaves preceding and to one following the 28 nearly complete leaves. Certain other fragments seemed to be in a slightly different hand and manifestly did not belong to the Minor Prophets.

The number of folders was increased to 35, one for each leaf preserved in part, one for the unplaced fragments, and one for fragments of another MS. A careful copy was then made of each page, using the Swete text to supply all missing portions, but enclosing such lacunae in heavy brackets. The utmost care was taken to restore the original lines, where any evidence was preserved, and to approximate them, where evidence was lacking. As one side of the fragments was more easily legible than the other, that was kept the upper side in the five fragmentary leaves, and a copy made of that side only. I did not venture to turn the small fragments again and again, as would have been necessary, if I had tried to carry a copy of both sides. The small fragments were so light and fragile, that a breath of wind would have scattered or destroyed them. Therefore the windows of the room were never opened and care even was taken to avoid coughing or sneezing near the fragments.

The small fragments were studied one at a time and usually allowed to rest on a small pasteboard card during the study. As the letters were always dim, it was necessary to try different angles of light and even to carry the papyrus near the window. As soon as a fragment was located, its position was marked on the dummy sheet of that page, so that I had at all times before me a text showing all missing portions. Naturally when a whole word or a distinguishable portion of a word was legible, the concordance could be used. Yet because of the frequent recurrence of the same words or even phrases, the concordance often gave only helpful hints. When parts of two or more lines were preserved, the position of letters in the dummy text was most helpful, and correspondingly the locating of each new fragment served to correct or to make more certain the line divisions in the more fragmentary portions. The dummy text was constantly changed to keep pace with increasing knowledge. This sometimes involved recopying pages that had been often reconstructed. Because of the strain on the eyes in working with such dim fragments I was seldom able to devote more than an hour and a half a day to this work. For this reason it was June, 1922, before I completed my first arrangement of the fragments. Naturally I had up to this time read but one side of the five more fragmentary leaves. By the method used in photographing, these leaves were then turned over without disturbing the position of the fragments, and the other side was read and a careful copy made of each page. In several cases this involved changing the position of fragments, which had been tentatively located from reading the upper side only. In the end this proved helpful, for the removal of such errors always enabled more fragments to be properly located.

When all possible fragments had been located, I proceeded to mount the reconstructed leaves in permanent form. For this purpose I needed glass both thin and strong and without defects. This was furnished by the University Hospital in the form of large, used X-ray plates, which I had thoroughly cleaned and cut in the desired size, seven by thirteen inches. The large fragments were then taken out of the Library vault and united with their respective pages. The heavy glass under which I had kept the fragments while working was removed, and after seeing that the fragments were placed as accurately as possible, one of the thin glass plates was carefully placed on a page after a little gelatine dissolved in warm water had been touched on the lower side of the glass to correspond with the smaller fragments. In spite of the utmost care the position of small fragments was in a few cases slightly changed by the movement of the air or the attraction of the glass. This slightly disturbs the alignment in a few places. Even before it dried the gelatine held the fragments in place, while the leaf firmly held between glass was turned over, the folder removed and a second plate of glass placed on the other side. On this glass no gelatine was used. I mounted thus not only the 33 leaves of the MS, which I had restored, but in a separate leaf all the unplaced fragments of the MS. All the fragments in a different handwriting, which seemed to belong to another MS, were mounted as a second extra leaf. Naturally in placing these small fragments nothing was attempted except to have them as legible as possible.

At this point I obtained a helper from the University Bindery, and while I held the leaf in a horizontal position firmly between the two plates of glass, she placed a binding about the entire edge. A strong cloth and special paste were used and each leaf was placed in a horizontal position under pressure until dried. The contraction of the binding cloth as it dried drew the glass plates closer together, so that all fragments were held in place, even if the slight application of gelatine should fail.

In September, 1922, experimental photographs were made of all pages and these were used for my studies in Europe during the winter of 1922-1923. In the fall of 1923 all were rephotographed, with the use of 1000-watt electric lights placed on each side at an angle of 45 degrees. These photographs seemed to be as good as could be expected from such dim and discolored fragments, and they have been used for the facsimile edition, which appears simultaneously with this volume. Most of my study of the MS has been made with the aid of the photographs, but the mounted papyrus leaves were retained in the Library vault and were consulted in all cases of doubt. Now that the edition is completed, the papyrus has been delivered to the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C., where it will be preserved in the Freer Gallery. In this introduction it is referred to as W.

PLATE III

SECOND BOX OF FRAGMENTS.

II. PALAEOGRAPHY

I. MATERIAL, FORM, SIZE OF MS

THE papyrus is thin and was of excellent quality. Utmost attention is necessary in order to distinguish between recto and verso, since the papyrus was made under such pressure that both the perpendicular and horizontal grain caused by the fibers of the reed show on both sides. However, by carefully noting the points of contact of the different pieces making up a layer, and also all the damaged portions, especially the edges, it was possible to distinguish recto from verso in all cases.

In mounting the MS the pages were numbered from 1 to 68, but since pages 1 and 2 were used for the small unplaced fragments the first fragmentary leaf is now numbered pages 3 and 4. My examination showed that all the even numbers were recto and all the odd verso, up to and including pages 37-38. The rest of the leaves to the end of the MS were arranged in reverse order, all the odd pages being recto and the even verso.

This variation can not be due to chance, for the only four leaves found in part unbroken on the binding edge are the leaves formed by pages 35-36 joined to 41-42 and 37-38 to 39-40. Also between the top fragments of pages 38 and 39 I found a piece of binding thread still in position as already noted in regard to leaves 14 and 15, on page 3. The position of the binding thread and the two double leaves in the middle of the book, as well as the succession of recto and verso, indicates that there was only a single quire in the part of the book preserved.

Other papyrus books formed of a single quire are not exactly rare, but are mostly early. The first instance of this to be discussed was the fragment of St. John's Gospel, No. 208 in vol. II of the Oxyr. Pap. and No. 1781 in vol. XV, which must have contained approximately 25 sheets or 50 leaves in a single quire. This is dated in the third century. Four Coptic examples are reported by Schmidt, Texte u.

Untersuchung. XXXII, 1, p. 7, namely the First Epistle of Clement (Achmimic) with 41 written leaves and 3 blank at the end; the Sayings of Solomon¹ (Achmimic); a gnostic papyrus of 72 leaves, compare Sitzungsbericht. d. Preuss. Akad. 1896, 2, p. 839, all from the White Monastery near Sohag. These have been dated in the 4th or 5th century. Other Coptic examples are the Heidelberg Acta Pauli, edited by Schmidt in 1914, and the Epistula Apostolorum, originally 46 leaves, published in Texte und Untersuchung, vol. 43, pp. 4 ff. A good Greek example is the 3rd century Homer in the Morgan Library, 62 leaves; cf. Sitzungsber. d. Preuss. Akad. 1912, p. 1202 f.

We should probably class here also the Homer fragment, Pap. cxxvi, published in Classical Texts in Brit. Mus. Plate VI, though only 9 sheets, or 18 leaves, are preserved. These contain the Iliad, Book II, l. 101 to IV, l. 40. The sheets are written on the recto only and have 48 to 50 lines to the page. This seems to be the middle part of a book. If it originally contained four books of the Iliad, about 700 lines are lost at the beginning and 500 lines at the end, so 14 or 15 more leaves would have been needed at the beginning and 10 or 11 at the end. This would call for a book of some 44 written leaves and four blank at the end.

The Hermas Papyrus of the University of Michigan (Pap. 917) is still another example. This had at least 80 leaves (there were probably about 100) and it seems to have formed a single quire. We may also mention the Berlin Papyrus of Genesis, 16 double leaves, which is published in the second part of this volume. It had one blank leaf at the end.² The Coptic John, edited by Thompson, 1924, had once 50 leaves.

It is certain that the papyrus of the Minor Prophets, in so far as it is preserved, formed a single quire. If, however, the whole of Hosea was contained, as seems certain from the small fragments shown on pages 1-3 of the Facsimile, about 12 pages more of text once existed at the beginning. Therefore there would have been 48 pages, 24 leaves up to the middle of the binding and only 30 pages, 15 leaves, after that point. If on the other hand we assume that there were two quires, we must explain why the second had 30 leaves and the first only about 10. Also if we admit a small first quire, we must grant that the writer so folded his double leaves as to have recto on the outside and verso on the inside of each doubled leaf in that quire, though he placed the leaves with verso on the outside in the second quire. Furthermore we have the above cited examples of large quires constituting whole books, but we know no cases of quires larger than 12 leaves in books containing more than one quire.

On the whole, then, it seems best to assume one large quire in this book, though that means that some nine leaves at the end were not used for the Minor Prophets, nor in fact written by the same scribe. These leaves may have been used somewhat later for another work, as fragments in a slightly different hand, but of the same general date, were found in both boxes of fragments. The papyrus also is similar, but is too decayed to venture the assertion that it is the same. These fragments are shown on pages 69 and 70 of the Facsimile and have not thus far been identified, as they are both small and illegible. Aided by a suggestion of Dr. Rendel Harris I have recently read with certainty [ε]ζεκηνλ before βρα και λεγει, so it is probable that we have a citation or explanation of that Prophet. Many other legible words indicate that the work was Christian. If my assumption is right, the fragments should belong to the beginning of the lost work, the last six or seven leaves of which were perhaps lost, as also the first six of Hosea, before the papyrus was buried in the sand. If the whole manuscript formed a single quire, the farther the leaves were from the middle the more likely they were to be torn or worn off. This would explain the almost complete loss of Hosea and of whatever served to complete the manuscript. The extremely awkward shape of the book may even have caused the outer leaves to be cut apart on the binding edge, so that the leaves might lie flat. The awkward shape of such books was well shown by the bound Coptic books mentioned above. If leaves had become loose in ancient times, it would have been easy to turn or misplace them. This is the best explanation for the circumstance that pages 25-28 were found in the order 26, 25, 28, 27, when the manuscript was opened. On this question compare also pp. 3 and 4.

The largest leaves now measure $5\frac{1}{2}$ by $11\frac{1}{2}$ inches (140 by 295 mm.) and all leaves approximate 5 by 11 inches. The binding edge is five eighths of an inch or 16 mm. wide on pages 35 to 42, where it is preserved entire.¹ The outer margin is preserved in some places to the width of an inch, 25 mm.; as the column of writing is $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches (108 mm.) wide, the original width of the leaf was not less than $5\frac{7}{8}$ inches (146 mm.). The top margin is in all cases lost, together with a part or all of the first line. The bottom is well preserved and in places reaches a width of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches (38 mm.). As the written portion is $10\frac{3}{8}$ inches (263 mm.) long, we can hardly assume the length of the leaf to have been originally less than $13\frac{1}{2}$ inches (344 mm.). The original size of the papyrus sheets used for the double leaves was thus about $11\frac{3}{4}$ by $13\frac{1}{2}$ inches (300 by 344 mm.). This exceptional size is a further indication of the excellent quality of the papyrus. We may compare the above-mentioned Homer fragment, Brit. Mus. Pap. cxxvi, which measures 11 by $11\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

The writing is in one column with 46 to 49 lines to the page.² The lines average about 30 letters in length. There are very few lines with a marked excess, but the lines are infrequently a good deal shorter. Words were carefully divided at the ends of lines, and if much vacant space was left, a line filler (>) was sometimes used. As the ends of lines are often dim or defective, it is not possible to determine whether these marks were regularly used with shorter lines.

2. INK, WRITING, DATE

The ink is dark brown and has faded little. There is little difference between the ink used by the first scribe and by the early correctors, although at times corrections seem paler. A later hand or hands used an ink that was distinctly darker.

The writing is a sloping uncial of the oval type with a decided leaning to the cursive, especially in the linking of certain letters. Also at the ends of lines, when it was necessary to crowd a little, the scribe inclines more to cursive forms of letters. It is clear that he was more accustomed to cursive writing, but was striving to adapt his style to use for a book.

This sloping hand is now recognized as possible even for literary purposes from the first century A.D. on, but it is difficult to date exactly the purely literary types of it. We shall do better to make our comparison with the cursive hand of documents and letters, paying special attention to the more cursive forms in our manuscript. See Plates IV and V.

A good document to compare is No. 72 of Vol. II of the Amherst Papyri, Plate XVIII, which is dated in the year 246 A.D. To be sure, our papyrus does not use the cursive forms of most letters consistently, and at times it shows cursive forms not found in this short document, but there is frequent agreement in the more characteristic letters such as the small omicron, the flat-topped sigma, the flat-bottomed beta, and the mingling of literary and cursive forms of kappa.

Another document which offers good parallels is No. 114 of Vol. II of the Catalogue of Greek Papyri in the John Rylands Library, Plate 19, which is dated before 281 A.D. In this we may note particularly the awkward beta with open top and flat bottom, which is rarely found in our papyrus. It also agrees in the two forms of kappa (κ , ω) and two of omega (ω , ω), as well as in a rare form of upsilon (φ), which our papyrus shows three times (Micah, 5, 10; Obadiah, 1, 5; Zachariah, 6, 15), and in one of pi (ρ) found in Zach. 3, 8. With both of these documents our papyrus shows similarity in the way α , γ , δ , ϵ , η , cursive κ , λ , τ , and ω are linked to the following letters.

Good parallels to this hand are found also in many of the letters addressed to Heroninus, Papyri Greco-Egizi, Vol. II, which can be dated soon after 250 A.D. We may add that a flat-bottomed omega is used by the diorthotes in Habak. 3, 2 and 11, and once by the first hand, Zephaniah 1, 4, $\epsilon\xi\alpha\rho\omega$, though it is there made with two strokes.

Of book hands we may compare British Museum, Pap. cxxvi (Plate VI of Classical Texts from Papyri in the Brit. Mus.), though that is distinctly older and less cursive. The Tryphon fragment on the verso of the Homer Papyrus (Plate IX of Class. Texts) is of the same sloping type and closer to our writing both in age and in cursive character. Kenyon, Pal. of Greek Pap. p. 105, notes that these must now be dated in the third century, though formerly placed in the fifth. This view is supported by Schubart, Einführung i. d. Papyruskunde (Berlin, 1918), p. 32. Cruder but similar in the slope and forms of some letters is one of the hands in the Marseilles Papyrus of Isocrates, Schoene in Mélanges Graux, p. 485, Plate II.

On the basis of these parallels we may assume that the date of the papyrus of the Minor Prophets was between the middle and end of the third century, A.D. Further evidence will be given later in the section on the subscription.

3. ABBREVIATIONS

The regular church abbreviations of $\overline{\text{Κύριος}}$ and $\overline{\text{Θεός}}$ occur in the singular ($\overline{\text{κς}}$, $\overline{\text{κν}}$, $\overline{\text{κω}}$, $\overline{\text{κν}}$, $\overline{\text{κε}}$, $\overline{\text{θς}}$, $\overline{\text{θν}}$, $\overline{\text{θω}}$, $\overline{\text{θν}}$) but the plural is not abbreviated; cf. Zeph. 2, 11; Malachi, 2, 11, $\overline{\text{θεους}}$. $\overline{\text{Ἀνθρωπος}}$ is always abbreviated except the vocative in Micah, 6, 8. The forms are $\overline{\text{ανος}}$, $\overline{\text{ανου}}$, $\overline{\text{ανον}}$, $\overline{\text{ανοι}}$, $\overline{\text{ανων}}$, $\overline{\text{ανοις}}$, $\overline{\text{ανους}}$; $\overline{\text{ανω}}$ is not found in the preserved portion.

$\overline{\text{Πνεῦμα}}$ is found only in the singular and is always abbreviated, $\overline{\text{πνα}}$, $\overline{\text{πνς}}$, $\overline{\text{πνι}}$, except possibly in Zachariah, 12, 1, where I have supplied [$\overline{\text{πνευμα}}$], and in Micah, 2, 11. $\overline{\text{Ἰσραήλ}}$ is abbreviated $\overline{\text{ιηλ}}$ very often; it is written in full in Amos, 9, 14 (?), Micah, 1, 15, and Malachi, 1, 1.

$\overline{\text{Ἱεροσαλήμ}}$ is not abbreviated before the ninth chapter of Zachariah, except for the doubtful case, Zach. 2, 4, where there is not room in the lacuna for the word in full. In Zach. 9, 10 the form is $\overline{\text{ιηλημ}}$; then we find eight cases of the word written in full in the twelfth chapter, but $\overline{\text{ιλημ}}$ in 14, 2 and 8. In 14, 10 the form is $\overline{\text{ιηλημ}}$, but thereafter $\overline{\text{ιλημ}}$ occurs in all cases (7) to the end of Malachi.

There are also two cases of abbreviation by suspension, common in cursive documents: $\overline{\text{προφη}}$ for $\overline{\text{προφήτου}}$ in Habakkuk, 3, 1 and $\overline{\text{διαψαλμα}}$ for $\overline{\text{διαψάλματος}}$ in Hab. 3, 3. Two other cases are found in the subscription, which will be discussed later.

$\overline{\text{Πατήρ}}$, $\overline{\text{μήτηρ}}$, $\overline{\text{θυγάτηρ}}$, and $\overline{\text{υῖός}}$ are not abbreviated. At the end of a line ν may be shown by a stroke over or a little after the preceding vowel; in 74 cases it is final ν and in 12 medial.

But one numeral occurs in the text and it is distinguished by a stroke above and by space before and after it; $\overline{\delta}$, Zach. 6, 5. Also in the titles the name is followed by the number each time (Amos in lacuna), but in the subscriptions the numeral is certainly omitted after $\overline{\text{Αμωσ}}$, and probably after $\overline{\text{Ιωνας}}$; two others, $\overline{\text{Ιωηλ}}$ and $\overline{\text{Αγγαι}}$ are in lacuna. Also after $\overline{\text{Αμβακουμ}}$ in the subscription the numeral has disappeared, but the position of the ornamental strokes shows the letter was written. In the other subscriptions the numeral is still found. Strokes appear both above and below the letters used as numerals, but are so similar to the ornamental strokes above and below the first letter of each title or subscription, that I have not felt that they could be distinguished as the regulation mark accompanying a numeral except in the cases of the two letters, $\overline{\alpha}$ and $\overline{\beta}$.

4. PUNCTUATION

The common punctuation is a single dot in high position, though the height varies from near the middle of the preceding letter to well above it. It is very frequent and seems to represent both major and minor divisions. It can often be seen from its position, that it has been inserted after the manuscript was completed, since no proper space has been left for it. It is not impossible that all were inserted by later hands, but in that case the scribe must have used slight spaces sometimes, in order to show separation of phrases. A single dot in low position is rarely used and seems to mark a weaker division. The few exceptions to this may be due to a later hand, who was prevented from placing the point properly by the nearness of the letters. Two dots, placed as in a colon, are used 13 times, and all except one (Micah, 2, 11) are major divisions or paragraph ends, and so are sometimes accompanied by paragraph marks or line fillers. In Micah, 2, 11 it is possible that I have misread, for the lower dot is not exactly under the upper one, as it should be, if both were made by the same scribe. The lower dot may be a later addition or a mark caused by age. There are many such in the manuscript and sometimes it is hard to distinguish them from the ink marks. In Habakkuk, 3, 13, there seem to be double dots both before and after διάψαλμα. The second set was probably inserted because the scribe had written διάψαλμα in the middle of a line, as if it were a part of the text. At the end of Zachariah, 6, 8, a combination of three dots occurs (∴), perhaps not all from the same hand.

5. PARAGRAPH MARKS

Paragraph marks in an ornamental form (coronis) were placed at the end of each Prophet. They can still be distinguished in whole or in part after Micah, Obadiah, Jonah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Haggai, and Zachariah. We find also straight marks before and after the title of the prayer of Habakkuk, 3, 1. Also similar marks seem to show ends of paragraphs at Zephaniah, 3, 13, and Haggai, 1, 6. A different shaped mark (>) is quite certainly a paragraph mark at the end of Habakkuk, 3, 13, διάβαλμα, and possibly after πρὸς μὲ λέγων, Zachariah, 6, 8, though this mark is elsewhere used to indicate an omission, which is supplied in the lower margin. In a large part of the manuscript the margin is too fragmentary, or too dim, for one to be positive that paragraph marks were not used, but they certainly were not frequent.

6. ACCENTS

I have read, with a greater or less degree of certainty, 174 accents in the manuscript. Some are certainly in darker ink and so presumably from the third hand. Still others seem slightly paler and may be from the diorthotes or from an early reader. I have printed in the text every accent as I seem to see it, though recognizing that many cases are not free from doubt. Certain of the errors are perhaps not to be explained as accents, as ή, Amos, 2, 13; ή often takes a stroke in early manuscripts to set it off from its noun. Other errors, though sometimes too dim to base much argument on, are: κατὰξω, Amos, 9, 2; τῆ, Micah, 6, 9; μεγάλη, Joel, 2, 25; οπίσω, Nahum, 3, 5; σύμμεικτος, Nahum, 3, 17; ἰωσεδεκ, Haggai, 1, 14; έμον, Haggai, 2, 8. I now class ημεραῑ, Jonah, 3, 4, as a stroke over the iota; see on iota adscript below.

Excluding these obvious errors on the part of the scribe or in my reading, we find a system of accents closely parallel to the prevalent one in Greek. All three accents are used, but a grave on the ultima was not changed to an acute at the end of a phrase or sentence; also enclitics have no effect on the accent of a preceding word. An acute replaces circumflex on the penult in four cases: γλώσσα, Micah, 6, 12; δραμόνται, Joel, 2, 7; βασανείτις,¹ Nahum, 1, 4; σκύλα, Zach. 14, 6. There are two cases of acute for circumflex on the ultima, ιππέις, Nahum, 2, 4, and ψυχής, Haggai, 2, 9.

On the ultima there are four cases of grave for circumflex: ιερείς, Joel, 1, 9; τραυματιῶν, Nahum, 3, 3; ψυχής, Jonah, 2, 6; ποῦ, Zach. 1, 5. Circumflex for grave appears in δᾶν, Amos, 8, 14, οῡαι, Hab. 2, 15, and καθῶς, Zach. 1, 4; the grave accent is found over γῆ five times, never the circumflex.

Other errors are δοξά for δόξα, Micah, 1, 15; αλώνος for ἄλωνος, Micah, 4, 12; οψόνται for ὄψονται, Micah, 5, 4 (this is surely a later hand); τὶς for τίς, Micah, 6, 9. This is probably a text variant, the indefinite pronoun for the interrogative, as the acute accent is correctly placed over the interrogative in three other passages: Jonah, 4, 5; Nahum, 1, 6; 1, 9. A similar confusion gave αὐτή for αὔτη in Zach. 5, 6.

We may further note that in the case of diphthongs the acute stands over the first vowel, but the grave over the second, except perhaps ληνοί, Joel, 1, 17. The circumflex curves over both vowels in the three cases occurring.

In Zeph. 3, 10, μὸν appears with grave accent. This is the only case of an enclitic affecting accent, but on analogy with the Bacchylides and Pindar papyri, Oxy. Pap. 841, and others it might indicate an acute on the preceding syllable. This system of accents has been discussed by Kenyon, Pal. of Greek Pap. pp. 29 f. In an incomplete form it was used in a good many papyri, mostly poetical, from the first century B.C. to the third century A.D. Our scribe or scribes certainly knew nothing of that system, yet there are a few other errors, which might point to a limited use of such a system of accentuation in their archetype: στασίν, Nahum, 3, 11; αὐτὴ for αὔτη, Hab. 1, 11; εἰπὰ, Zach. 5, 6; and perhaps ἐκεῖν, Jonah, 1, 8, and οἶ, Zach. 11, 5.

In three cases accents, all apparently from the third hand, seem slightly misplaced. I have printed them ἐξαιφνης, Micah, 2, 3; διεσκέδασται, Hab. 1, 4; and ἐμπαιξεται, Hab. 1, 10, but I might equally well have printed ἐξαιφνης, for the mark is entirely over ξ, though it points toward ε. Similarly we may read ἐμπαιξεται. I feel quite sure that these errors are due to careless placing rather than to false pronunciation.

7. BREATHINGS

The rough breathing, generally in the form ϗ, but twice ϗ, is found 44 times, of which only three are incorrect: ἦ for ῆ, Micah, 5, 8; ἦς for ῆς, Obadiah, 1, 11; and perhaps ἄνδρα, Micah, 2, 2, though I offer another explanation for this below. Of the cases of rough breathing 30 are over the relative pronoun or the article. The other words receiving it are: ὦς, ἔως, ἅγιος, ὅτε, and εἰς. Diphthongs take the breathing over the first vowel.

The smooth breathing is found only four times; ἀδελφῶν, Micah, 5, 3, and ἦ, Micah, 6, 3, and ὅ, 8, are correct. The last case, ἦχοι, Joel, 3, 14, is extremely doubtful. If it is the smooth breathing, it is made in the rounded form and the mark seems from a later hand. In general the breathings are from the original scribe or an early corrector, and in most cases it is impossible to distinguish with certainty. In a few cases the ink seems distinctly paler.

8. OTHER MARKS

The double dot occurs frequently over initial iota. I have found 171 cases, and there were doubtless more, which can no longer be seen. A short stroke replaces the double dot in one case, Haggai, 1, 14. Double dots were found over initial υ only 23 times and a short stroke in four other cases. The marks occur most often over the forms of ὑμεῖς. Cases not initial are rare. I have noted πρωῖ, Amos, 5, 8; μωῦσην, Micah, 6, 4; υῖων, Joel, 3, 8; ἐξίλασεται, Hab. 1, 11; πρωῖ, Zeph. 3, 3; 3, 5; κατίσχυε, Haggai, 2, 4; πραῦς, Zach. 9, 9; πρωῖμον, Zach. 10, 1; ηνῦστρον, Malachi, 2, 3. When not initial, the dots were used to indicate that the vowel was not to be pronounced with the preceding vowel. The cases not covered by this rule may be explained as false division of words.

In all of these marks I have printed in the text and here consider only those that are reasonably certain. The manuscript surely had more originally. Only ι and υ receive these marks, unless we thus interpret the mark over ανδρα in Micah, 2, 2. The distinguishable mark over the α runs into the bottom of an iota from the line above, so that one can not be certain whether a stroke or a rough breathing was intended.

We find some cases of apostrophe at the ends of words, but they are often difficult to distinguish and probably more were written than can now be read. I have recorded 70 cases. The mark is generally found after foreign names ending in a consonant and perhaps should always be written there. Other cases are ουδ' and αλλ' twice each, and the following once each: ουχ', δι' (for δια), δ' (for δε), and μεθ' (μεθ υμων).

A short straight stroke occurs several times over iota adscript and in one case, Haggai, 2, 17, was misunderstood by a corrector, who punctuated before ῑ. There are 9 cases where the stroke is read with certainty, all except one of which are from the first hand. We may also mention here ημεραῑ of Jonah, 3, 4, though the iota is not adscript.

Word division at the ends of lines is on the whole carefully made. The rule is that all consonants, which might stand at the beginning of a word, are joined to the following vowel. Therefore in the various combinations of consonants we find double consonants separated. Also λ , ρ , μ , and ν are separated from a following consonant. Against the rule σ is more often separated from a following β , γ , θ , κ , μ , or τ ; note especially $\epsilon\sigma|\tau\alpha\iota$; yet I found $|\sigma\tau\rho$ four times, $|\sigma\tau$ nine times, $|\sigma\kappa$ twice, and $|\sigma\lambda$, $|\sigma\mu$, and $|\sigma\pi$ once each. The combinations $|\sigma\tau$ and $|\sigma\tau\rho$ were mostly caused by the rule to divide compound words into their component parts. This rule may be followed even if it attaches a single consonant to a preceding vowel, as $\kappa\alpha\tau|\omicron\iota\kappa\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu$; yet the regular pronunciation rule at times prevails even in compounds and we find such divisions as $\kappa\alpha|\tau\omicron\iota\kappa\omicron\upsilon\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$.

9. SPELLING AND GRAMMATICAL FORMS

The manuscript is conservative in spelling and the more pronounced errors were corrected by the diorthotes. The general character can be seen from a comparison with the Swete text, which in the main represents Codex B. My comparison showed 118 cases of $\epsilon\iota$ for ι , 50 of which were certainly corrected by a second hand. As the corrections are almost invariably paler than the ink of the text, many others have doubtless been obliterated by age, or could not be read with certainty. The opposite change, ι for $\epsilon\iota$, is found only 10 times, four of which were corrected by the second hand. To these we must add three cases in which the second hand changed a correct $\epsilon\iota$ to ι . This is not surprising considering the number of times he corrected the error. Other variations from the common spelling are few: ϵ for $\alpha\iota$ 16 times (two by second hand), yet five of these were corrected by the second hand; $\alpha\iota$ for ϵ 11 times, four of which have been corrected by a later hand; ω for \omicron 15 times (two by the second hand), but one of the errors was corrected by the later hand; \omicron for ω 11 times, one of which was due to the second hand, which corrected two of the errors; ν for η is found five times and the opposite change twice, yet little importance can be attached to these changes as they concern $\eta\mu\epsilon\iota\varsigma$ and $\upsilon\mu\epsilon\iota\varsigma$; η occurs for $\epsilon\iota$ seven times and the opposite but once, and that corrected by the second hand. Other vowel interchanges are very rare.

There is a slight tendency to double consonants, particularly ρ and μ . I noted 14 cases, only one of which was corrected by the second hand. Double consonants of the Swete text are represented by single ones only six times and two of these were corrected by the second hand.

In assimilation of consonants the similarity to the Swete text is close, the papyrus showing six additional cases of assimilation; but it fails to assimilate consonants in compounds in four instances, one of which was corrected by the second hand.

Before consonants ν movable appears in five cases omitted by Swete, but seems omitted once before a consonant and once before a vowel contrary to Swete. Εἴκοσι never takes ν; there are four cases. Similarly πασι is found in Amos, 4, 6, and Zach. 12, 3, but πασιν in Amos, 6, 8; 9, 9, and Micah, 2, 12. There are only four other cases of omitted ν in the preserved portion of the papyrus. The form ενεκεν is always found except in Haggai, 2, 14, which has εινεκεν. Crasis does not seem to occur, even και εγω being written in full.

A few declined proper nouns are treated as indeclinable in some cases: ιωνα seven times for ιωναν and six times for ιωνας; two of each were corrected by the second hand. Also ιουδα for ιουδαν is found in Zach. 1, 19 and 21 and εζεκια for εζεκιου in Zeph. 1, 1.

Errors in declension were noted but three times, ιερεαν, Haggai, 2, 2, μνειαν, Zach. 13, 2, and ορον for ορος, Zeph. 3, 11, and all were corrected by the second hand. False gender occurs once, τον δροσον, Zach. 8, 12, but was corrected by second hand.

Iota adscript was written nine times by the first hand and added in eight other cases by the second hand. The first hand regularly placed a horizontal stroke over the iota adscript, the second hand does so but once.

The second aorist forms are retained eight times against the encroaching Alexandrine first aorist in α, but in seven other cases the α form is found contrary to Swete. The third person plural in οσαν is not found.

Other forms worthy of note are few: λημφομαι always occurs, yet εκλιπανον, Zach. 11, 16, for εκλίμπανον, which helps to explain the error in the Sinaitic. Also συνδεηθητε, though corrected by the diorthotes, is supported by the first corrector of the Sinaitic. The form κατηξαν for κατέαξαν is found in Zach. 1, 21. This might be considered the aorist of κατάγω, were it not corrected to κατηγαν by the third hand. The verb εξολεθρευειν never changes the ε after λ to ο. One faulty compound was noted, αποέρυφα, but it was corrected by the second hand. This evidence fully warrants the statement that the manuscript was written with care and corrected with exceptional care.

III. THE SUBSCRIPTION

THE last page of W was assembled from many small fragments, but the position of each piece is fixed by the continuous text on the other side of the leaf. We read at the end first the regularly expected subscription [μαλ]αχιας $\bar{\iota}\beta$. Below in a larger hand with blacker ink is a second note of approximately the same date, of which the following only is read with certainty:

$\overline{\text{προφ}}$ κ · · · · · ει [

 $\overline{\text{ε}}$ ολοκ^ο

The first four letters are marked as an abbreviation by the slanting line through the bottom of the last letter and should stand for some case form of προφηται. As the work contains the Minor Prophets it seems reasonable to expect here a general designation or title for the whole work. The word which follows is very fragmentary and indistinct, and I had attempted at first to place the fragments so as to read and restore $\bar{\iota}\beta$ στοιχοι but further study with a high-power microscope (ten diameters) has forced me to abandon that view, which I had already published in the Philological Quarterly, III, p. 161 ff. Without discussing further that error and its causes I will proceed with what I now see or seem to see. The microscope has not only shown more parts of letters but has assisted in arranging the fragment a little more accurately.

The abbreviation mark through the bottom of φ passes through the top of κ; there could have been no letter between them. The slight traces so interpreted have been found to be mere stains in the papyrus. After the κ on the next small fragment there are remnants of the tops of two letters; the first is merely the slightest bit of a curve and so could belong to β, ε, θ, ο, ρ, or σ; the second letter is almost certainly an υ, as the left and right curves, which alone remain, are so close together that they must have joined. The space between κ and υ is a little too broad for a single letter but not large enough for two letters.

However, the κ fragment is clearly misplaced as it is too low and slightly turned. To place it correctly forces the fragments a little farther apart. An examination of the other side where the text is continuous shows that the fragments must be separated a little more than would result from straightening the line of fragments. Therefore there must have been two letters between κ and ν . Looking now at the $\omicron\lambda\omicron\kappa\omicron$ fragment below we see two very slight marks just under the right limb of the κ in the first line and another just beyond the left limb; now it is not likely that both limbs of a κ would have extended so low, for we must remember that the κ fragment has to be raised slightly as well as turned. Furthermore the other lowest fragment must be moved to the right about the size of a letter. This would put its sole letter, ϵ , under the middle of its abbreviation stroke, which is entirely on the fragment above. An examination of the opposite side shows this change probable from the text there, as the scribe is spreading his letters especially near the line ends as he nears the end of the book. This examination further showed that the $\omicron\lambda\omicron\kappa\omicron$ fragment must be moved a little farther from the ϵ fragment, for we have to have space for $\epsilon[\phi\nu\lambda\alpha\xi\alpha\mu[\epsilon]\nu$ in one line and $\epsilon\pi\omicron\rho\epsilon\nu\theta\eta[\mu]\epsilon\nu$ in the other. We are dealing with broad letters somewhat spread.

It is clear from all this that the $\omicron\lambda\omicron\kappa\omicron$ fragment must be moved to the right more than the space of a letter. Therefore the slight mark under the left limb of the κ belongs to the right limb, which is often longer in cursive. This gives the relative position of the two fragments. The two slight marks under the right limb of the κ belong to the first and second letters after it. These letters must have reached somewhat farther below the line than all letters except ρ , ν , ϕ , ψ , and perhaps ι and η ; ϕ runs too high to be considered as do ψ and often ι . The slight curve noted at the top before ν suggests that the second of these letters is ρ . Only a vowel could stand between initial κ and ρ . The choice seems to lie between η and ι . The second leg of η is sometimes longer and the mark here is so much nearer the bottom of the following letter than it is to the bottom of the κ , that only a double-stroke letter is possible. Naturally a ν or μ could have left similar traces, but are impossible, if κ and ρ are right.

In the next fragment ϵ and ι are legible. Furthermore the curve of the ϵ is so straight that there would be too much space between it and the preceding ν unless the fragments are moved closer together.

An examination of the continuous text on the other side of the leaf shows that part of a τ in one line and of a cursive κ in the other are missing, as well as whatever space might come at the ends of the words. That space was not reckoned upon in placing the fragments, as it occurs too irregularly. Yet the scribe seldom links the letters so as to combine two words, while he often leaves a space of varying size, though not often more than half the size of an average letter. There is one other line from which we may judge the spacing of these fragments. There the lacuna is larger but it falls in a single word, $\theta\epsilon\lambda\eta[\tau]\eta$. This is a common combination of letters and they are regularly linked. The width of η and even τ varies a good deal in the manuscript and the fragments were here placed as closely as the most compact examples, since in the two lines below only a part of a letter was each time missing. In regard to this line also we can say that the fragments can not be placed nearer together, but they may be separated a little more. It seems certain therefore that in the subscription there is space for a letter between ν and $\epsilon\iota$ or there is a word end there. It is doubtful if a broad letter could be crowded in, but as the size of the letters and their nearness to each other varies in the subscription, I think we may assume any letter except one of extreme breadth.

The restoration of the whole word following $\pi\rho\omicron\phi$ should contain the following letters, $\kappa\eta\rho\nu[\]\epsilon\iota[\]$. For this I can conjecture only $\kappa\eta\rho\nu\kappa\epsilon\iota\alpha$, found in ecclesiastical Greek with the meaning "preaching." This is a possible designation of the contents of the book "The preaching of the Prophets," but I have not found any example of the word used in that connection. Whatever the meaning, this seems a designation of what preceded in the MS and not of what followed, though in one of the unplaced fragments in a related hand I have read $[\epsilon]\zeta\epsilon\kappa\iota\eta\lambda\beta\omicron\alpha\ \kappa\alpha\iota\ \lambda\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\iota$ (see p. 9).

Neither are we dealing with some chance note written in the MS and having no relation to its contents. The margins of the MS have many notes, contemporary and later, in uncials, in cursive, and in Coptic, but every legible one deals with the content of the MS. This fact combined with the natural expansion of $\pi\rho\omicron\phi$ into a form of $\pi\rho\omicron\phi\eta\tau\alpha\iota$ convinces me that we are here dealing with some designation of the book or its contents, but the exact form of the designation will probably always remain doubtful. I shall show below that the MS probably arose in a Coptic community, but the script looks like that of a regular Greek scriptorium. The name of the MS may thus have come from the pagan scriptorium rather than from the Christian owners.

As there is a second line to the subscription it is probable that the first line reached across the page. That would leave room enough for the mention of the number of στιχοι in the book or for the name of the person who ordered the writing. Nicephorus (Migne, Patr. Gr. vol. 100, col. 1058) gives the number of στιχοι in the Twelve Prophets as 3000, but it is to be noted that he disregards the hundreds in his whole list. According to Galen, quoted by Harris, Amer. Jour. Phil. vol. V, p. 139, the στιχος was reckoned at 16 syllables in prose. On this basis there should be above 3500 στιχοι in the Minor Prophets, but less than 4000. The numbers given in the Lucianic MS 763 (Vatopedi 514) supported in part by MSS Y and 22 total 3681, which must be very nearly correct.

In the last line of the subscription is found what I explain as the price, either cost of writing or sale price, of the manuscript. The first letter $\bar{\epsilon}$ is shown by the stroke above it to be a numeral, while the word $\omicron\lambda\omicron\kappa^{\circ}$ follows. The way in which the last letter is written indicates an abbreviation, which was first read as $\omicron\lambda\omicron\kappa\omicron\tau\tau\iota\nu\omicron\varsigma$ by Professor Rahlfs. This reading I have accepted, though there have been other suggestions, and in my article cited above I discussed briefly the value of the coin. There is need of a special study.

The derivation and meaning of holocottinus as full-weight coin of pure metal was given by Erman, Aegypt. Zeitsch. vol. 18 (1880, p. 60), and supported by Lemm, Bull. de l'Acad. Imp. des Sciences de St. Petersburg, 1913, Kopt. Misc. p. 629. Spiegelberg, Kopt. Handwoerterbuch, p. 50 ($\Lambda\omicron\Upsilon\kappa\omicron\tau\tau\iota\nu$), appears to accept at least the meaning. All assume that the full-weight coin was gold. Yet it is wrong to dismiss the definition, denarius, in Sophocles' Lexicon, without discussion, as is done in the Cat. of Greek Pap. in the Brit. Mus. vol. III, p. 242, for Suidas, s. v. denarius, is the authority, and he is known to have used old sources.

There seems little doubt that from the late fourth century on the coin is regularly of gold, though the designation "of gold" or "in gold" is often added, especially in the earlier period in both Greek and Coptic.

In the time of Diocletian and before, at least as long as undepreciated silver coins still existed, Suidas' definition may well be correct.

Thus in Pap. 1366 of the Univ. of Mich. the writer of a letter sends three holocottinoi to buy anklets and trimmings for a chiton and himation. This is one of a series of letters written by a soldier in humble circumstances. They are from the time of Diocletian. Yet Professor John G. Winter, who is editing the series, holds that gold coins must be meant.

In Coptic, especially in legends that go back to the times of persecution, the holocottinus is a small coin, preferably silver, though Budge, Coptic Martyrdoms in the Dialect of Upper Egypt, translates every time "obols." A good example is page 189, where 100 holocottinoi are given to a boy by his parents, that he may entertain his schoolmates; and page 190, where he gives the same 100 holocottinoi to the captain of a ship as passage money for himself and another to a monastery. In another example holocottinoi ΕΝΝΟΥΒ (in gold) are plainly gold coins. Yet the words $\bar{\eta}$ ΝΟΥΒ are not always decisive, for in Worell's Coptic mss, Univ. of Mich. Stud. vol. X, p. 166, $\bar{\eta}$ ΝΟΥΒ means money, not gold, as Crum by letter confirms. There 700 holocottinoi are loaned to a poor man who asks for a little "money."

Cases where holocottinus means drachma are not rare in earlier Coptic, yet most citations are not free from doubt, however they may be interpreted by the editors. It is the same case with $\nu\omicron\mu\iota\sigma\mu\alpha$ in Greek and nummus in Latin. It is hopeless to try to reconcile with a definite value every instance even in a single author.

In early times the taxes were paid in silver drachmae and later in depreciated drachmae; see $\rho\upsilon\pi\alpha\rho\alpha\varsigma$ $\delta\rho\alpha\chi\mu\alpha\varsigma$ in Wilchen's Ostraka, passim. The latest instance I have found of this is in 261 A.D. Later the tax payments are reckoned in gold. An excellent instance from the fourth century is Pap. 985 of the Brit. Mus., where 30 holocottinoi are defined as $\chi\rho\upsilon\sigma\omicron\upsilon\upsilon$ $\nu\omicron\mu\iota\sigma\mu\alpha\tau\alpha$ $\alpha\pi\lambda\alpha$ $\epsilon\upsilon\sigma\tau\alpha\theta\mu\alpha$ $\tau\rho\iota\alpha\kappa\omicron\nu\tau\alpha$, that is, 30 coins of gold simple (without alloy) and of full weight. This seems an excellent confirmation of Erman's interpretation of holocottinus, but not necessarily of its derivation.

To return to our subscription, if we interpret $\bar{\epsilon}$ $\omicron\lambda\omicron\kappa^{\circ}$ as five holocottinoi, as I am inclined to do, it seems necessary to connect it with the "book of the Prophets," either as price of writing or of the completed book. In that case the holocottinoi must equal denarii, as I have shown in the article cited above. Yet silver denarii must have practically disappeared before the time of Diocletian, and it is not likely that the term even in the form holocottinoi, "pure coins of full weight," would be used long after the coin ceased to be in circulation. This interpretation of the subscription practically forces us to date the MS before 270 A.D., if not before 260, a dating well supported by the writing and the character of the text.

IV. THE CHARACTER OF THE TEXT

I. ACCOMMODATION TO THE HEBREW

IN so old a manuscript as this papyrus one may safely assume freedom from the influence of Origen as well as from the later editions, and this assumption is supported by the examination of the text. Even in the cases where the manuscript inclines toward the Hebrew in opposition to many of the Septuagint manuscripts, the type of text is almost never in accord with that reported for the Hexapla of Origen. In most such agreements we either have no evidence for the forms used by Aquila, Theodotion, and Symmachus, or they have forms differing from our papyrus.

Confining our attention to those readings, in which the first hand of W has little or no other Greek support, we find 33 instances of rather definite accommodation to the Hebrew text, while in this list the only semblances of support found in Aquila, Symmachus, or Theodotion are the following:

(1) In Habakkuk, 3, 1, W (ωδης) + υπερ των αγνοιων, Hieronymus quotes Aquila, Symmachus, and Quinta for + υπερ των αγνοημάτων and Theodotion for + υπερ των εκουσιασμών (read ακουσιασμών from ακουσιάζομαι). The addition in W seems to be derived from Symmachus or Quinta.

(2) In Zephaniah, 3, 10, the first hand of W wrote δεομενοι μου εν τοις διεσκορπισμενοις for προσδέξομαι εν διεσπαρμένοις μου, but it was deleted by dots over most of the letters, which is the common method used by the diorthotes. The accepted text, προσδέξομαι εν διεσπαρμένοις μου, is omitted by A Q, 26, 49, 106, 130, 153, 198, 233, 239, 311, and others, and is marked with an asterisk in Syro-Hex and MS 22. It seems to be from Theodotion. Theodoretus quotes Symmachus for the addition ικετεύοντά με τέκνα των διεσκορπισμένων υπ' έμοῦ ενέγκωσι δῶρον έμοί. As Aquila is not quoted for the passage there is the possibility that he was the source of W, but no great probability when we consider the greater number of cases of direct influence of the Hebrew.

(3) In Nahum, 3, 18, the first hand of W doubtless wrote ο εκδεχομενο[s και ο συν]αγων. The second hand deleted ο εκδεχομενος and so probably the following και. The W text gives two translations of a single Hebrew word and ο συναγων seems the better of the two. Yet a scholium in Flaminius Nobilius, which refers this reading to οἱ λοιποὶ, is the only authority for it.

The rest of the 30 apparent accommodations to the Hebrew find no semblance of parallels in the other translations.¹ There is however a little direct testimony on the relationship to the other translations in passages where the Greek forms vary from each other rather than from the Hebrew original. In Amos, 4, 4, W reads εις την τριτην ημεραν in agreement with Symmachus (Syro-Hex and ms 86^{ms}), while Aquila had εις τρεις ημερας and Theodotion εν τρισιν ημεραις. The regular Septuagint is εις την τριημεριαν. To this we may add ουαι for ω in Habakkuk, 2, 9, which ms 86 refers to Symmachus. And finally in Jonah, 4, 1, συνεθυμησεν for συνεχυθη by the first hand of W is probably due to direct Hebrew influence, but the second hand correction to ηθυμησεν seems to be from Symmachus, quoted only by Syro-Hex. Symmachus seems the source therefore of four or perhaps five otherwise unsupported readings of W.

One agreement with Aquila seems certain, Amos, 8, 3, ολυλυξουσιν αι στροφιγγες και for ολυλύξει (τὰ φατώματα). Manuscript 86 quotes only αι στρόφιγγες for Aquila, but the verb may be assumed, as ολυλύξουσιν αι ὡδαί is referred to Symmachus and τὰ ἐπάνωθεν to Theodotion. Furthermore the fact that the Aquila reading is added to the regular text rather than a substitute for it suggests that it crept into the text through a gloss written above rather than through an intentional change. A similar case is found in Obadiah, 1, 19, where W reads εν τη πεδινη σεφιλα. Syro-Hex gives Aquila και ἡ πεδίνη for και οἱ ἐν τῇ σεφηλά. Therefore W has a doublet made up of Aquila and the regular text, and here also it may well have crept in through an explanatory gloss.

No agreement with Theodotion alone was noted except the doubtful one in Micah, 1, 16, where the first hand reading χηρειαν was erased and ξυρησιw written over it by the second hand. There is always some doubt attaching to a second-hand reading, and that is increased here by the fact that the diorthotes does not regularly erase. Yet the correction is in a lighter ink and fairly well written, so I have assigned it to the second hand, though recognizing that it may well have been written by an early reader. In this passage MS 86 gives φαλάκρωσιν as the reading of Aquila and Symmachus, while "rasuram" is referred to Theodotion on the evidence of Syro-Hex. Therefore the correction in W may have come from Theodotion but equally well from the original Hebrew. In Zachariah, 14, 17, the case is a little different. W adds και ουκ εσται επ αυτοις νετος after και ουτοι εκεινοις προστεθησονται. This is a doublet and the added phrase is referred to Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion by Hieronymus, who gives only the Latin, et non erit super eos imber. Greek MSS 97 and 407 agree exactly with W, and except for the omission of και also MSS 68, 87^{mg}, 106, and the Aldine edition. The same addition, but with αυτους for αυτοις, is found in MSS 22, 36, 48, 51, 62, 86, 87^c, 106^c, 147, 228, 231, 711, and probably Y; MS 310 has αυτω. Field has pointed out that Aquila regularly uses ομβρος, not νετος. As there are five other fairly probable cases where W has followed Symmachus, it seems best to refer the form in W, i.e. with αυτοις, to him as source, in which case the form with αυτους would naturally fall to Theodotion and the Hexapla. The more abundant MS evidence for αυτους serves to support this view.

In Joel, 3, 4, W has και γε for και, an addition found elsewhere only in MS 40 and the Complutensian edition. This may be derived from Aquila or Theodotion on the evidence of Syro-Hex, but also from the original Hebrew. A different connective is reported for Symmachus.

When we consider the place which Theodotion's translation held among the Christians, it seems wiser to assume no indebtedness on the part of W than to refer these two or three cases, all doubtful, to his influence. Further we have certain proof of the direct influence of the original Hebrew on W as well as a sparing use of the translations of Symmachus and Aquila. These sources are sufficient to account for all of the peculiarities of W without having recourse to Theodotion as a source.

The tendency on the part of the scribe of W to combine these variants with the regular Septuagint text together with the deletion of one of the alternatives by the diorthotes indicates that some of these direct or indirect accommodations to the Hebrew were glosses in the parent manuscript.

Another instance of this, which I have not ventured to class with the certain cases of Hebrew influence because of the uncertainty of the text, is found in Zach. 3, 5, where I read *επιθη[τε μιτραν κιδαρ]ιν καθαραν επι την κε[φαλην αυτου κ]αι π[ερι]εβαλον αυτον ιματιο̄ [και επεθηκ]αν μι[τρα]ν κιδαριν καθαραν, etc., but *κιδαριν*² is deleted by dots over each letter and so probably *κιδαριν*¹ or *μιτραν*¹. In one or both cases the form μίτραν και κίδαριν is found in MSS 22, 36, 46, 48, 49, 51, 62, 68, 86, 87, 95, 97, 114, 147, 185, 228, 238, 711, and Ald. There does not seem to be room for και in either case in W. That the combined form is only a doublet from the Hebrew is shown by Hieronymus, "Pro cidari in Hebraeo legimus SANIPH, quae mitra a plerisque dicitur." The origin of the doublet as a gloss is more apparent in W than in the Lucianic MSS or their probable forerunners, MSS 46-711, 86, 62-147.*

Further evidence of the way in which these accommodations to the Hebrew crept into the early Septuagint text is furnished by the third hand or hands of W, for in Habakkuk alone we find over a dozen such glosses written between the lines, usually with careless deletion of the original text. These are plainly from a hand later than the original scribe. None of these glosses can be correlated with any of the known translations. Therefore it seems clear that some ancient reader knew Hebrew and corrected certain portions of the text to the Hebrew form known to him. All of the corrections by later hands will be discussed more fully later.

For the present, sufficient of Hebrew adaptation has been shown to make it clear that Origen is not alone to be blamed for the appearance of this kind of corruption in the Septuagint text. We may be sure that our papyrus is a fair sample of many that circulated among the Jews and early Christians. In all periods the Greek text was being re-adapted to the Hebrew and after the appearance of the later translations their influence was sure to be felt. The fact that Theodotion had little or no influence on W should not be considered as a proof that he did not influence other manuscripts before Origen. Among the Christians the translation by Theodotion was much more popular than the others, so its influence was probably greater from the first.

of the Septuagint more complicated, for the certainty of correctness in the pre-Hexaplaric text has been decidedly diminished. Yet the fact that the problem has become more complicated is no proof that it is essentially more difficult. We must still follow the outline of Lagarde and try to classify the Lucianic, Hesychian, Eusebian, and Hexaplaric MSS so far as possible. But we have gained in the ability to classify especially the earlier MSS, for we now know that a limited accommodation to the Hebrew does not necessarily imply Hexaplaric influence. This will tend to increase the number of manuscripts which may be thought to represent in some measure the pre-Origen text, and careful study and comparison with this and with other old papyri should enable us to begin to divide the pre-Hexaplaric class of manuscripts into subclasses, which will finally have to be our chief guides for the restoration of the Septuagint text.

2. COMPARISON OF W WITH THE UNCIALS

The standard by which the excellence of newly discovered manuscripts has usually been tested in recent years is the closeness of agreement with the uncials; so we will try that measure first, even though we may be measuring the excellence of the different uncials rather than that of W.

In Amos and Micah the only uncials available in the Swete edition are A, B, and Q. The numbers of agreements with W are as follows in the 526 readings considered:¹

W A Q	119	22%	W B	69	13%
W A B	56	10%	W A	24	4½%
W B Q	86	16%	W Q	20	3.8%
A B Q	152	29%

At first glance it may seem that B stands nearest to W, but that is only apparent. As A Q stand nearer together than either B Q or A B the single agreements of W with A and Q must be less, just as the agreements with A Q combined are more. In fact the total of agreements W A Q, W B Q, and W Q (225) is greater than either W B Q, W A B, and W B (211), or W A Q, W A B, and W A (199). Q is the more conservative manuscript and stands somewhat between A and B. Therefore it is nearer to W and so perhaps to the original text. The same inference can be drawn from the column of triple agreements. Each of these three shows the number of times that the manuscript not included stands alone. Therefore Q stands alone less often than any of the others. Yet doubt is cast on these results by the fact that W is alone 152 times, far more than any of the others, and this doubt is intensified when we note that in 63 cases it finds support in later manuscripts or Versions.

In spite of this doubt let us continue the comparison in the remaining Prophets, where ms Σ is extant, so that we have the agreements with four rather than with three uncials to consider. The table of agreements in 1591 variants follows:

W Σ A Q	86	5.4%	W A Q	194	12%	W B	29	1.8%
W Σ A B	129	8.1%	W A B	16	1%	W A	28	1.7%
W Σ B Q	255	16%	W B Q	25	1.6%	W Q	35	2.2%
W A B Q	308	19%	W Σ B	98	6.1%	W Σ	20	1.25%
Σ A B Q	348	21.9%	W Σ A	14	.9%
			W Σ Q	8	.5%

Here B seems to have assumed the rôle of most conservative manuscript, undoubtedly in part because of its close relationship to Σ. The outstanding feature of the agreements is the relationship of the two groups W A Q and W Σ B. A Q is decidedly nearer to the papyrus text than Σ B, but agreement in only 12% of the readings considered is far from harmony. Again in the agreement of single manuscripts with W we find that Q stands a little nearer, though the excess is not noteworthy.

When we turn to the first column a much greater discrepancy is found than in Amos and Micah. The inclusion of Σ has greatly reduced the number of independent readings in each of the other manuscripts except A, which remains unchanged at 16%. The 19% of special readings in Σ is easily understood from the ignorance and carelessness of the scribe, but the huge total for W is truly remarkable, for 171 of the 348 readings not supported by the uncials are found in the minuscules or the Versions. It is evident that there is a very important element in this old papyrus text, which is not represented in the highly esteemed uncials.

3. THE COMPARISON OF THE W TEXT WITH THE MINUSCULES

In this section I shall try to extend our view so as to include the later manuscripts reported by Holmes and Parsons, supplemented by those contained in the Goettingen Apparatus, which was kindly made accessible to me by Professor Rahlfs, together with a few which I photographed and studied during the year 1922-1923. By disregarding obvious errors the total number of readings considered was reduced to 1230. In the case of manuscripts reported only by Holmes and Parsons a certain margin of error must be allowed, but more careful collations might sometimes show such manuscripts even nearer to W, as has been the case in certain of those recollated by Professor Rahlfs and his co-workers.

The manuscripts with the number of agreements with W in order of nearness are as follows:

36	"	87	534	"
37	"	Ⲙ	513	" (missing in Amos and Micah)

We find here five minuscules which stand nearer to W than do any of the uncials, and this in spite of the fact that the totals for the older uncials are somewhat increased by the inclusion of linguistic peculiarities. Not only are the numbers of agreements greater for these minuscules but there are fewer textually unimportant variants included. I may add also that for MSS 49, 40, 114, 240, 153, 68, 95, 185, and 42 I had only the Holmes-Parsons edition. Some of these might well be placed higher in the list, if more careful collations were available.

It is noteworthy that the great majority of the minuscules listed above have already been recognized as representatives of the pre-Hexaplaric text. As was to be expected Q and B stand the nearest of the uncials, but A, V, and Ⲙ are surprisingly low in the list. To be sure Ⲙ is missing in Amos and Micah, in which I considered 375 readings, or about 30% of the whole. If Ⲙ is assumed to have the proportionate number of agreements in those two books, its total would be 732, but that number is somewhat padded, for in the case of Ⲙ I had included all 2nd and 3rd hand corrections, though I had not included them in any other MS. There are 78 of these, so that Ⲙⁱ should have a total of about 620 agreements, if reckoned in the same manner as all the other MSS. This is exactly the total of A. Two other incomplete MSS are deserving of mention, MS 449 with 217 agreements in Zachariah and Malachi and MS 544 with 211 agreements. In these two Prophets 370 readings were considered. The 82 agreements with W on the part of the correctors of Q are noteworthy, yet we must remember that the number of corrections and marginal glosses in that MS is very large. Relatively W agrees with Q oftener than with the correctors of Q, yet the corrections also came from a MS or MSS of closely related type. Attention must also be called to the 86 agreements of W with the correctors of MS 86; here it would seem as if the first corrector had access to a MS nearer related to W than the MS he was correcting.

The frequency of agreements between W and the correctors of Q and 86 may however be otherwise explained. We have seen that in a few cases the scribe of W had made additions to the text, which were recognized as glosses by the diorthotes and deleted. These are either adaptations to the Hebrew or borrowings from the other translations. Therefore it would seem that the parent of W had corrections or glosses, which the copyist was expected to disregard. That MS may accordingly have been like Q and 86 in its corrections and marginal glosses. If this be the proper explanation, we should think of these MSS as products of a type of tradition or early edition of the Septuagint, which represented the pre-Hexaplaric scholarship on the Greek text of the Old Testament.

I included the Complutensian Edition in the comparison for reasons to be given later. It ranks relatively high because many of its special peculiarities were not considered in the count.

4. MANUSCRIPT GROUPS

It remains to be seen if any tentative groupings of the pre-Hexaplaric MSS can be discovered, for this must be the first step in the reconstruction of the original text. Such relationships can be more easily discovered by a consideration of readings lacking the support of the great majority of the MSS. I accordingly made a list of all the readings in which W is supported by not more than two or three MSS or groups of MSS. This list, which includes 300 readings, it is not necessary to print here, as they can be easily gathered from the Notes which will follow the Text. The numbers of agreements with W are as follows:

MSS 198, 233, 534, 49, 710, and 538, though closely related to W on the basis of the complete list, stand relatively low in this list of selected readings. The natural explanation is that they belong to a larger group or groups, which by their numbers and consistency have generally excluded their special agreements from this selected list. And it is true that MSS 198, 233, 534, 538, and 710 together with the fragmentary MSS 449 and 544 are found united in support of noteworthy readings often enough to warrant the assumption that they belong to the same group. On the other hand MS 49 is more often associated with MSS 26 and 106, as well as with A and Q, which usually have a rather large following.

Equally noteworthy is the relatively higher position of MSS 8, 86, A, V, 239, 311, 42, 130, 147, and 62. They seem to show a mixed text, which may be explained as an old base overlaid by a later corrected or edited text. In the case of MS 86 this explanation is practically certain, for 18 of the 44 cases of agreement are found in the corrections and marginal notes. In like manner we must assign 7 of the agreements of 8 and 4 of those of Q to the 2nd hand.

Considering now all the MSS that rank high in this selected list we may point out a few relationships. MSS 407 and 410 are a closely related pair. In Amos and Micah MS 407 is much the better, as is to be expected because of its greater age, but in the last nine Prophets MS 410 is of equal worth. The closeness of this pair to W is shown by 407, being the sole Greek support for W in 7 readings, 410 in 7 readings, and both in 7 other readings. These 21 readings are the following:

Micah, I, 1, $\omega\theta\alpha\mu$ (for $\omega\alpha\theta\alpha\mu$) = W 407

VII, 16, $\epsilon\pi\iota\theta\eta\sigma\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu$ $\tau\alpha\varsigma$ $\chi\epsilon\iota\rho\alpha\varsigma$ = W 407

Joel, I, 6, $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omega\nu$ (for $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\nu$) = W 407

III, 8, + $\tau\alpha\varsigma$ ($\chi\epsilon\iota\rho\alpha\varsigma$) = W 407, 410; cf. Boh.

Obadiah, I, 17, ($\sigma\omega\tau\eta\rho\iota\alpha$) + $\sigma\upsilon$ = W 410

Jonah, I, 8, ($\chi\omega\rho\alpha\varsigma$) $\sigma\upsilon$ $\epsilon\iota$ = W (407), 410

- Jonah, IV, 6, - της = W 407, 410; cf. Ach. Boh.
 Habakkuk, II, 15, οναι (for ω) = W 410; cf. 106^c, Ach. Boh.
 III, 6, εστησαν (for εστη) = W* 410 OL^{moz brev}
 III, 19 καταξει (for ταξει) = W 407
 Zephaniah, III, 11, - οτι = W 407, 410.
 Zachariah, III, 6, ιματιον (for ιματια) = W 410
 V, 11, αυτης (for αυτου) = W 407, 410
 IX, 17 νεανισκων (for νεανισκοις) = W 410
 XI, 13, απεδοκιμασθην (for εδοκιμασθην) = W 407
 XIII, 2, εκκανσω (for εξαρω) = W 407, 410; cf. Boh.
 XIV, 7, (εκεινη) + εσται = W² 407
 Malachi, I, 2, - λεγει Κυριος = W 410
 II, 6, εξ (for απο) = W 407, 410
 II, 17, + και (αυτης) = W 407
 III, 10, τον θησαυρον (for τους θησαυρους) = W 410; cf. Mass. Vulg.

Remarkable as this showing is, MSS 407 and 410 have a further claim to distinction, for when they differ from W, they are often in agreement with 8 and B, and that even in rare and old readings. It is certain that their parent contained a pre-Hexaplaric Egyptian text. This parent text has been worked over and accommodated to later texts somewhat in each of the descendants, which apparently suffered correction in the same manner that Old Latin mss were adapted to the Vulgate. Ms 410 even suffered an extra revision, but fortunately it did not extend beyond Micah.

Mss 40 and 42 form another pair and both are now lost, so that we have to rely on the Holmes-Parsons report. Ms 40 is much the better of the two, or is better reported. It seems that a third member of this group was used as the chief source of this portion of the Complutensian edition. But as that ms is either lost or not known, the Complutensian will have value in restoring this old base. In these special readings it is much the best member of the group. It has been generally assumed that the Complutensian was based on Vatican mss (Nos. 108, 248) and a Venice ms (68), but we now find the honesty of the editors confirmed, for on page 4 of the Prologus, after referring to the Vatican and Venice mss, they say: partem ipsi magnis laboribus et expensis undique conquistivimus, ut copia emendatorum codicum abunde superesset. It seems that an Egyptian ms, or one containing a relatively pure Egyptian text, was among those secured. The 21 readings in which W alone goes with members of this group follow :

- Amos, IV, 4, — το (πρωι) = W 40, Compl.
 V, 15, — του (ιωσηφ) = W Compl.
 VII, 1, ερχομενης εωθινης (for ερχομενη εωθινη) = W Compl.
 VIII, 10, θρηνου (for θρηνον) = W 40, 42 Compl. (86^{ms})
 IX, 2, — και = W Compl.
 Micah, I, 15, (κληρονομια) + σου = W 40, 42 Compl.
 IV, 7, απερριμενην (for απωσμενην) = W Compl.
 V, 2, tr. οικος before βαιθλεεμ = W Compl. (Ach)
 V, 2, + του (βαιθλεεμ) = W Compl. ; cf. Ach.
 Joel, II, 9, + των (θυριδων) = W Compl. ; cf. Ach. Boh.
 II, 14, + και (θυσιαν) = W 40, 42 Compl. (also 68, 114, 240 ex silentio H. & P.)
 III, 4, (και) + γε = W 40 Compl.
 Habakkuk, III, 2, — εν οργη = W³ Compl.
 III, 10, ιδο[ν σε] (for οψονται σε) = W² Compl. (ειδον σε) ; cf. OL Vulg.
 Zephaniah, I, 1, υιου (for υιον) = W Compl.
 I, 13, — εν αυταις = W Compl. ; cf. Mass Vulg.
 III, 9, διοτι (for οτι) = W Compl.
 III, 18, διεσκορπισμενους (for συντετριμμενους) = W Compl.
 Zachariah, II, 9, εξαπεσταλκεν (for απεσταλκεν) = W 40, 42 Compl.
 VIII, 21, — πεντε = W Compl. ; cf. OL Hier.
 IX, 7, + των (οδοντων) = W 42

This group is closely allied to 407-410 and is less good, though its best member, Compl., is not inferior in special readings.

Another pair of MSS rather closely related is 46 and 711, and these are not only often associated with MS 86, but through it with another notable pair, MSS 62 and 147. This last pair has been worked over more than the previous two but still retains a large amount of the original text. I add a few samples of the readings illustrating the interlocking of these groups with W.

- Amos, II, 3, — αυτης² = W 147 (40, 153?)
 II, 11, + οι (υιοι) = W 62, 147 Boh
 Micah, VII, 10 + οτι (οι οφθαλμοι) = W² 62, 147

- Jonah, III, 6, σποδον (for σποδου) = W 46, 86*, 711 OL^w
 Habakkuk, I, 15, ανειλκυσεν (for ειλκυσε) = W 46, 711, (62), 147
 III, 3, μεταβολη διαψαλματ(ος) (for διαψαλμα) = W 62, 147, 86^{mg}
 (Ach^{Schmidt})
 III, 3, ουρανον (for ουρανους) = W; cf. ο ουρανος = 62, 147, 86^{mg}
 Zephaniah, I, 5, του βασιλεως αυτων (for του κ̄ν) = W 86^{mg}, 147²
 III, 13, - του = W 46, 711
 Zachariah, VII, 11, νωτα (for νωτον) = W 46
 XI, 2, - ο (δρυμος) = W 46-711, 62-147, 86

Manuscripts 130 and 311 have long been recognized as a pair and have even been classified as Lucianic. We now see that their union antedated the adaptation to the Lucianic text, and that in so far as they have escaped revision they give us another glimpse at an old Egyptian text. I add a few of the noteworthy readings:

- Joel, II, 19, tr τω λαω αυτου και ειπεν = W 130, 311
 Obadiah, I, 18-19, - διοτι κ̄ς̄ ησαν = W* 130, 311
 I, 19, σεφιλα (for σεφηλα) = W 130, 311
 Haggai, II, 10, του δευτερου ετους (for ετους δευτερου) = W; cf. 130
 (του πεμπτου ετους δευτερου) (311)
 II, 23, - λεγει κ̄ς̄² = W 130, 311, 410, Arm OL Zachariah, I, 9, tr σοι δειξω = W V 130, 311 Compl.

With all these groups, as also with W, we must guard ourselves against overvaluation. The pre-Origen text of the Septuagint had had centuries of life and development. There may even have been earlier editions and there were certainly distinct family groupings. Ordinary corruption, scholarly correction and adaptation to the Hebrew had brought changes into all the families. Therefore the task of the future editor will be to establish as many of these pre-Origen ms families as possible and then with impartial judgment to determine the text on the basis of all. The uncial groups Σ — B and A — Q will be of great value but, if we may rely on the evidence of W, several of the minuscule groups will equal and one will even outweigh them in value.

5. COMPARISON WITH THE VERSIONS

Further light may be thrown on the text character of W and of these groups of manuscripts by a comparison with the early Versions, but in most cases the evidence is so fragmentary, or so unevenly reported, that I do not venture to compare totals.

In the special readings just discussed I find the Achmimic supporting W 102 times and in 15 of these cases it is the sole support. The Bohairic supports 84 times, 12 of which are not found elsewhere. The small fragments of the Sahidic agree 22 times, in two of which it is the sole support. It is plain that we are dealing with a Version or Versions that came from the immediate home of W. Achmimic is much the nearest of the three, for its big total of agreements is obtained in spite of large lacunae in the only MS preserving the text. Sahidic should seemingly be ranked as a close second, though the fragments are too meager for one to be positive, while Bohairic shows frequent signs of having been adapted to the later Greek text. Yet even there the total of agreements is most impressive and in the large lacunae of Achmimic it is our sole Coptic witness. This is the more important as the Coptic Versions show many signs of a common origin.

I have included in this Coptic evidence some cases where the agreement is disputable, as for example, the addition or omission of the definite article and cases of word order. I recognize that in most, if not all, of these cases, the form in Coptic is determined by the idiom of that language, yet when W is the sole support, or nearly so, for the similar form in Greek, one is forced to see relationship. Obviously it is not the influence of W on the Coptic in many of these cases, but of the Coptic on W and its allies. This may mean the direct influence of the earliest Coptic Version, which would thus have to be earlier than the middle of the third century, but I am of the opinion that most, if not all, of these agreements can be equally well explained as due to errors made by Coptic scribes, and even more to the glosses written in by Coptic readers of the Greek. This influence may well have preceded the formal translation into Coptic. Furthermore we have some notable examples of corrections or glosses of this sort by a later hand in parts of W, while in the badly decayed margins there are fairly frequent illegible or nearly illegible Coptic words, or parts of words. These will be discussed below. The affiliations of W with the Coptic were thus fairly close, but the exact form in which the influence was exerted I do not venture to decide. That question should be handled by one who is more conversant with the Coptic than I am, and he should take under consideration not alone the agreements of the Coptic Versions with W but also with the allied groups discussed above, especially 407-410, Compl-40-42, 62-147, as well as Σ-B and A-Q. In particular the corrections and marginal notes of Q and 86 will be important. I do not think that Greek influence on the Coptic can explain all the parallels.

No other Version shows even an approximation of such relationship as the Coptic. In the OL I have noted 47 agreements with W in the special list, but many of these are drawn from Sabatier, who gives the readings of two Roman mss much accommodated to the Vulgate. The pure OL is too fragmentary for us to draw conclusions from numbers, and the evidence of Sabatier's mss, while at times valuable, is too often injured by agreement with the Vulgate.

If we confine our attention to the few fragments of the true Old Latin text and to citations from the earlier Church Fathers, W shows fewer agreements, but some are noteworthy. A list of 17 with scanty support follows:

- Joel, I, 6, tr ανεβη εθνος = W Ach Boh OL^W (OL^{spec} om εθνος)
 I, 12, μηλα (for μηλον) = W OL^W (MS reads malae, but corr mala et; cf. και)
 II, 3, πεδια (for πεδιον) = W 407 Compl Ach OL^W (campi)
 II, 29, - μου = Σ V W Compl Ach OL^{Tert}
 Micah, IV, 13, - *θησομαι*² = W Arm OL^W
 V, 4, στησονται οφονται = W Ach OL^W
 VI, 7, - υπερ = W OL^{Cyp} (yet W αμαρτιας, OL^{Cyp} peccatum)
 Habakkuk, III, 6, εστησαν (for εστη) = W* 410 OL^{moz brev}
 Zephaniah, I, 11, (αργυριω) + και χρυσιω = W Ach OL^{spec}
 I, 13, - εν αυταις = W Compl OL^{Cyp} (Mass Vulg)
 III, 1, - αυτη = W Ach OL^{Tyc}
 Haggai, I, 11, - και επι τα ορη = W 26, 49, 130-311 Ach Arm OL^{Cyp spec}
 I, 12, - ο θς αυτων = W OL^{Cyp}
 II, 23, - λεγει κς = W 130-311, 410 Arm OL^{Tyc} OL^{Sab}
 Zachariah, III, 9, (ανατολην) + ονομα = W²; cf. OL^{Cyp} nomen ei est (= ονομα αυτω, 22, 97, 228); ονομα αυτου = 36, 48^c, 407 Ach
 XIII, 7, εκσπασατε (διασκορπισθησονται, A, etc.) = Σ B V W 410 OL^{Tert}
 Malachi, III, 1, - εαυτου = Q* W OL^{moz brev}

In only three cases do W and OL stand alone together. The most frequent supporter is the Achmimic, but Σ-B V 407-410, 130-311, Compl Q Boh Arm, 26 and 49 are found. These witnesses also agree with Old Latin, when W is opposed, and as might be expected, we find the groups A-106, 62-147, Compl-40-42, 95-185, as well as some Lucianic MSS, in agreement even oftener than W, 407-410, or the Coptic Versions.

Here I may mention W's 13 special agreements with the Armenian as reported by Holmes and Parsons, one of which finds no other support. It is possible that a renewed study of Armenian in better MSS would give results.

In the same list of special readings W is found in agreement with the Vulgate 44 times. In 33 of these readings the Massoretic also agrees, so the general source of the relationship is plain. Yet it must be noted that in 4 of the 11 cases disagreeing with Massoretic the Vulgate, or Vulgate and Hieronymus, are the only support for the W text. Hieronymus may have been slightly influenced in his translation by a Greek text from Egypt, or his Hebrew text may have had a few older variants. In either case he shows a relationship to an Egyptian type of text.

We can thus begin to see a little light regarding the relationship of the groups of Greek MSS and the Versions. The W text came from the upper Nile or the Fayûm and is most closely affiliated with the Achmimic Version. The Old Latin came presumably from Alexandria and stands nearer to B, V, A, 62-147, 95-185, and even 130-311. When Σ differs from B, or Q differs from A, they incline towards W and the Achmimic, yet in all these groups we are dealing with the basic Egyptian text, which shows innumerable cross-currents of relationship.

6. UNSUPPORTED READINGS

Many of the unsupported readings of W are interesting and all will be discussed in the Notes. If itacisms and plain cases of influence of the Hebrew are left out of consideration, there are 216 unsupported variants of the first hand. Of these 45 are misspellings and 39 more are interchanges of inflectional forms. A few of these 39 are perhaps only misspellings, but the majority must be reckoned with the 27 cases, which involve the interchange of words. In all of these cases one must admit the possibility of influence of the original Hebrew, or of other translations, even though the texts preserved do not give the needed parallel. The largest class of the unsupported variants are the additions, which number 57, and these consist in most cases of but one or two words; only two are plain dittographies. Several look like explanatory glosses, that have crept into the text, but the majority are plain additions, which agree with the general sense of the passages. These also seem to point to the influence of the Hebrew or of other translations.

There are only four unsupported transpositions; that was not a characteristic fault of our scribe any more than the dittography just referred to.

There are 44 omissions, of which 9 are long and involve like endings of phrases. The others are all brief, usually one word, rarely two, and seem to point to a characteristic error of the scribe. Seldom does the omission admit of a sensible interpretation of the passage. Omissions and misspellings are the special faults of the scribe, and if we add the itacisms, the number becomes fairly large, but many of the latter have been corrected by the diorthotes.

V. THE TEXT CHARACTER OF THE CORRECTIONS IN W

I HAVE remarked in a previous section that it is often difficult to distinguish between the hands of the different correctors, but it may nevertheless be helpful to determine the textual character of the corrections, which appear to be contemporary, or nearly so, and those which are shown by the ink to be distinctly later. There are 274 of the first kind, of which the majority are corrections of itacistic and other obvious errors. There remain 80 cases which may be expected to show text affiliation, but of these 12 are unsupported. Yet even these show the general accuracy, for seven are really text variants, two variants in form without difference in meaning, two appear to be glosses, and only one is an obvious error. Among the 68 remaining readings those supported by Achmimic occur oftenest, 21 times, in three of which Achmimic is the sole support. The other frequent supporters are as follows:

Compl-40-42	18	times	(2 sole)
62-147	16	"	(1 sole)
407-410	13	"
Hebrew	13	"	(1 sole)
Lucianic MSS	13	"
A-106	13	"
Q	13	"
95-185	11	"
86-86 ^{mg}	11	"	(1 sole)
198-233-534 etc.	9	"
46-711	9	"
Bohairic	8	"
B	7	"
239	6	"	(1 sole)
Σ	5	"	(1 sole)
153	5	"	(1 sole)
Sahidic	5	"	(1 sole)
Armenian	4	"	(1 sole).

In general it may be said that the corrector is following a similar type of text to that used by the first hand, though it is rather nearer to the Achmimic, and less near to 407-410, which seems the best of the Egyptian groups. Whether it was derived from another MS or from the corrections and margins of the parent of W, it is quite plainly a somewhat more advanced type of the same kind of text development. Therefore it may well be that most of these corrections were made on the basis of the parent MS, which would certainly have been quite sufficient as a guide in correcting the much larger number of obvious errors. It has already been suggested, on the basis of the relationship to Q and 86, that the parent of W had many corrections and marginal notes. This view is further strengthened by the fact that the corrector deletes two manifest glosses, which had been put in the text by the first scribe, and yet adds two other glosses. Likewise the correction in Jonah, 4, 1 of the unsupported συνεθυμησεν to ηθυμησεν in agreement with Symmachus (cf. Syro-Hex) points to the use of marginal additions in the parent MS rather than to another Septuagint MS.

There are some 60 corrections in a slightly darker ink and cruder script. These I class as the third hand, though in some cases doubtfully; further I recognize that there were more than one later reader of the MS, who made corrections and notes, though I have not been able to distinguish between them. The most numerous corrections are found in Habakkuk, especially the third chapter, and these may well come from one corrector. To judge from the crudeness of his script he was at least a century later than the first scribe.

Of these 60 corrections a dozen correct obvious errors and as many more are absolutely unsupported, two at least being nothing more than glosses, while two more are later or erroneous spellings. One error, + $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ ι, Zach. 3, 9, is more interesting. There is no reason for adding $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ at this point but Achmimic adds ΑΟΥ = και. If these two readings are to be connected, we must assume that και inserted in some Greek MS was misread by our corrector. Of the remaining third hand corrections 13 are more or less close adaptations to the Hebrew, nothing similar being found elsewhere except in the Vulgate. In nine other cases we find the same relationship to the Hebrew, but with Achmimic also agreeing. An early Coptic Version may have served as intermediary in some cases. There remain ten corrections which have some Greek support, such as the Lucianic MSS, 62-147, 130-311, Compl-40-42, B, Q, or 407, but in all except one of these cases there is agreement with the Hebrew or with one of the Coptic Versions; and in three cases the Coptic is the sole support. It seems clear that no other Greek MS was available for these later corrections, except possibly for the 10 just mentioned. In all the other late corrections, and probably in some of these ten, the corrections were made direct from the Massoretic Hebrew or from an early Coptic Version, one or both of which influenced the later correctors. The direct influence of the Hebrew is the more extensive, and so the more certain.

VI. MARGINAL GLOSSES

ON page 30 there is a long gloss on the right-hand margin just opposite Jonah 2, 6. It is in Greek and the following letters are read, though with doubt in the case of some:]αι /] κυκλω /] ηντην /] κεφαλην. We do not know exactly how broad the margin was originally nor how fully it was covered by the gloss; so it seems useless to attempt to restore it. The text opposite which it stands reads αβυσσος εκκυκλωσεν με εσχατη· εδν η κεφαλη μου. With two of these words apparently repeated in the gloss, though with different construction, it is safe to assume that the gloss was a parallel to the text. If so, it is in accord with what we have already proved several times for the parent of W, namely, a parallel drawn from the Hebrew or from one of the early Versions, which had been inserted in the margin or between the lines and from there had crept into the text. We have several other instances of this same sort of connection with the Hebrew or with the other translations in corrections by the second and third hands, which have just been discussed. This gloss is by a different scribe and in a much more cursive hand, but its origin was probably the same.

On the left-hand margin of page 16 there are traces of several letters, but only one is legible, η. Twelve lines below a very cursive ω or μ is seen, while at the bottom one reads plainly ουκ, though no connection with the text is indicated. These seem Greek glosses, but just to the left of ουκ there are remnants of Coptic letters] ΝΩ ΕΡΟϞ. These are unintelligible and nearly the same may be said of the fragmentary Coptic words on 13 other pages. As tentatively read they are as follows:

p. 14 left-hand margin near middle:] ΥΛΒ̄Ϟ |] ΡΠΕ |] Χ̄Ν̄ΜΜΑ |
] Χ̄ΟϞΕ |] Τ̄Ϟ;

p. 18 left near bottom:] ΒΟΛ;

p. 20 left near bottom: ΩΠ̄Ϟ; on lower margin: ΕΤΝΑϞΜΑΡϞ··;

On page 50] ΕΡΟQ |] ΨΑ is clearly read, from which Professor Schmidt has suggested [†ΕΙΝΕ] | ΕΡΟQ [ΜΠΙΜΑΝ] ΨΑ. This corresponds to the Greek text opposite, εγω (+ επαγω man 2) επι του δουλου μου ανατολη, "I lead in to my servant the east (rising)," for it calls attention to the false interpretation of the Hebrew.

This is all that I have been able to explain from the Coptic glosses and it is too little to support definite conclusions, but it at least suggests their character. They were apparently notes and interpretations written by a Copt, who did not know Greek well, and the object was to enable him to interpret the text orally, probably in a sermon after he had read it. It is not likely that much of value would be obtained from such glosses, even if longer examination should restore a few words more. The important fact to be derived is that the home of the MS was in Sahidic territory or in that of some closely allied dialect. Neither is the fact that both Greek and Coptic notes are found on the margins of W a proof that the MS changed its home. Everything in the Greek text and Greek glosses of W tends to ally the MS with the Achmimic and Sahidic traditions. The monastery where it was preserved and for which it was probably written was either Coptic or affiliated with the Copts. With the waning of the Greek influence in the country districts during the fourth and fifth centuries Copts replaced the Greeks in some monasteries and in still more there ceased to be Greek speaking Copts. That is probably what happened in the ancient home of W.

VII. THE REPRINT OF THE TEXT

IN the following pages the text of the Papyrus is printed in full, preserving the few abbreviations and with the retention of such punctuation, accents, breathings, apostrophes, and other marks as seem to have been original, or practically contemporary with the writing of the manuscript. Words have been separated and capitals used for titles contrary to the style of the manuscript.

The text attempts to reproduce the work of the first scribe as he left it. Errors by the first scribe, when immediately corrected, and all corrections by the diorthotes and later correctors are given in the footnotes.

All the smaller lacunae have been supplied from the Swete text unless the space or context prevented and another variant or emendation exactly filling the space was found. All such additions are enclosed in square brackets. In a few cases I have indicated by dots a lacuna, which I had not been able to supply with any degree of certainty.

In the fragmentary or indistinct portions I have printed as certain all letters of which a characteristic portion is visible. Dots have been placed under certain letters because the visible remains agree with similar parts of other letters, as well as with the one printed in the text.

The original lines have been preserved or restored so far as possible. The page numbers of the Papyrus are given on the left-hand margin of the page. For ease in reference the verse numbers are added on the left-hand margin and the chapter numbers on the right-hand.

The fragments tentatively assigned to the earlier chapters of Hosea have been placed first without the indication of lacunae between them, as the chapter and verse numbers appended are sufficient to show the points of separation of the fragments. The rather long lacuna at the end of Hosea and the beginning of Amos is indicated by bracketed dots and titles.

The rest of the fragments shown on pages 1 and 2 of the Facsimile Edition have been printed at the end of Malachi, as I was not able to place them even tentatively. The reading is often uncertain on one side or the other, yet a sufficient number of letters is in most cases preserved, so that the fragments could have been tentatively placed, if I had been able to find a corresponding text. Therefore most of them either represent unusual variants or are from Hosea, which I searched with less care.

In the residue of bits of papyrus and dirt from the two boxes of fragments, which are now preserved in a separate tray with the manuscript, there are a few fragments showing individual letters. These were neither mounted nor photographed, as there was no hope of placing them correctly nor establishing any doubtful reading through their agency.

VIII. NOTES

IT seemed desirable to present to the reader the text of W unobscured by notes and discussions. The first-hand reading always stands in the text, the second- and third-hand corrections are given at the foot of each page. In these notes I give such parallels as seem helpful for the interpretation of the less common readings as well as all matters connected with the arrangement of the fragments and the readings of the text. In order that the comparison with other texts may be easier the citations are to chapter and verse. These are followed by the text of W undesignated and with the end marked by a colon; the words in parentheses contain no variants but are added in order to show the location in the verse; thereafter come the parallels and discussion.

Greek MSS are cited by numbers as given by Rahlfs in Vol. 2 of the Mitteilungen des Septuaginta-Unternehmens. Collations by Holmes and Parsons were used, but verified wherever possible. In all cases where MSS are assumed to support the text of Holmes and Parsons because not cited for variants I have bracketed, questioned, or stated that the readings of the MSS in question were inferred from the silence of Holmes and Parsons.

Readings from MSS 403, 407, 410, 449, 456, 490, 534, 538, 544, 576, 710, and 711 were taken from the apparatus of the Septuaginta-Unternehmen in Goettingen, to which I was given access by Professor Rahlfs, and most of the Holmes and Parsons collations were verified or corrected from the same source. MSS 86 and 91 were collated anew from photographs. MSS Q and Y were reëxamined in many doubtful passages and MSS V and Γ in a few.

Old Latin readings are cited from Oesterley's articles in Vols. V and VI of the Journal of Theological Studies. The Bohairic is taken from Tattam's edition, the Sahidic from Ciasca's, and Wessely's edition of the Achmimic was used in my earlier studies. For all of these but particularly for the Achmimic I was able to use in my proofs comparisons and corrections made by Professor C. Schmidt while studying the Vienna manuscript of the Achmimic. All other Versions are cited from Field's Hexapla or from Holmes and Parsons.

HOSEA

- XIV, 8 ως (αμπελος): seemingly omitted only by B* Q.
 [το μνημο]συνον: the article is inferred from the space.
 Only B 22 48 233 omit.
 9 εγω κατισχυσω: = most MSS and Vers. but against B Q^a etc. which omit εγω.

AMOS

- I, 2 [την φω]νην: the article or three other letters are required by the space. It is not found elsewhere but compare Ach and Boh, which give the possessive pronoun by a prefix, the first letter of which corresponds in gender and number with the definite article.
ποιμενων: ποιμνιων in Q 42 46 86* 711 Arm Ach Boh.
 3 *εν*²: with most MSS; omit A 87 91 97 130 153 310 311.
 10 τα θεμελια: omit τα A V 26 46 49 62 86 106 147 233 310 410 711.
 11 [διωξαι]: against 40 42 Compl καταδιωξαι.
μητραν: with A Q Y 22 26 36 40 48 49 51 86 95 106 153 185 198 534 Compl Ach Boh Goth.
 [της γης]: I have inserted the article with MSS 49 51 311 Ald in order to fill the line. It is the simplest change but naturally not the only one possible.
φρε[ικην αυτου και το ορμημα]: all other MSS add αυτου after ορμημα, but here there is insufficient space. Either the first or second case of the possessive must be omitted.
 15 αυτων^{1,2}: only the second case is sure, but I have assumed that W was consistent. Q^{mg} quotes αυτου for Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion and it is found in 86² and the Lucianic MSS.
 II, 1 ημεραις: all other MSS read ασεβειαις.
 [επι τεσσαρσιν]: even without the article the line is crowded. Only Compl omits it.

- 2 θεμελ[ια]: the article is omitted also by A Q Y, and practically all the minuscules.
εν [τη] αδυνα[μεια]: the article is omitted by all other MSS. Ach and Boh have the indefinite article.
- 3 There seems no space for *και*¹, though it is nowhere else omitted. It is possible to transfer three letters from the beginning of this line to the end of the previous line and so insert και, but it would make an unusual line.
- 3 [πα]ντ[ας τους αρχον]τας: = A Q* 26 40 49 106 130 153 198 233 239 240 410 534 Compl Ach Boh.
 — *αυτης*²: = 40 147 153. Many MSS have αυτου.
- 4 ενεκα: = B Q V 87 91 130 239 311 403 490 538 (68 97 114 240?)
- 7 β[εβ]ηλωσω[σιν]: against βεβηλωσιν of B V Ach Boh and βεβηλωσουσιν of 86 534.
 — [αυτου]: also omitted by 153 Compl Ach Boh and Basil.
- 10 ημας: a manifest error of the first hand but not corrected till a late hand.
- 11 οι υιοι: article omitted by all others except 62 147 Boh.
- 13 κυλειετε: the error is an itacism, though it produces a different form of the verb. I generally omit such errors from the discussion.
- 14 [σ]ωση: probably correct; only A B Q* 26 86 91 410 have σωσει.
- 15 ουδε: with A B Q^{text} V 26 106 198 233 239 403 407 410 534 Boh; against και of the others.
μ[η σωσε]ι: = B V 26 86 91 239 410.
- 16 — ο κραταιος ου μη = A Q 26 49 68 87 91 97 106 130 198 228^{ms} 233 240 310 311 534 Compl Ald. Others omit part.

I have not been able to supply the lacuna here with any degree of probability, though it seems possible that an alternative translation from Aquila or Symmachus, or a repetition from the first part of the line, was placed in the margin of the parent MS and from there came into the text. The space fits well with ο [κραταιος φευξε]ται [και ο γυμνος διωξεται αυτον], but I have found nothing approaching it in any MS or Version.

- III, 2 φυλων: article is omitted by B V 22 26 36 48 49 51 62 86 95 106 130 147 185 233 311 Compl. της γης: only B seems to omit the article.
- 5 την γην: της γης in A 26 87 106.
- 6 — μη: only B seems to insert the extra negative.
- 7 ποιηση: against ποιησει of B Q 26 87* 106 147 239.
παιδειαν: = B (40 68 130?) Compl. All others add αυτου.
- 9 απαγγελ[ατε]: with most MSS against αναγγειλατε.
τας χωρας: against ταις χωραις in Q^a 40 42 46 86 410 711 Compl. = Mass.
[της αιγυπτου]: the reading is uncertain. Certainly the article was not omitted as in A, but εν τη αιγυπτω of Q^a and most minuscules is possible.
- την καταδυνασ[τειαν]*: = A Q 26 36 46 49 86 106 198 228^c 233 310 403 407 410 534 711 Boh.
- 10 εσται: against εστιν of Q^{ms} 26 Compl.
εν[αντιον αυτης]: the space would fit ενωπιον equally well.
- 11 την ισχυν: = Y 22 36 40 46 48 51 62 86 95 147 185 407 711
Others omit the article.
- 12 λωβον (for λοβον): = 46 86 87^c 130* 711. φυλης: thus most MSS. B and V (40 68 240?) prefix the article.
— και: = 36² 95 114 185.
ιερευς: the singular finds no support and was corrected by the second hand. Many MSS read κλινη or combine.
- 14 εκδικω: against εκδικησω of A Q 40 42 68 86* 87 91 97 106 153 228 240 310 Ald Boh.
- 15 συγγεω: = A B^c Q^a 26 106 198 233 403 407 410 534; 86^{ms} quotes it from Symmachus.
[οι ελ]εφαν[τινοι]: the article is added by Q^a Y 22 36 42 46 48 51 86 130 239 311 407 538 711.
οι[κοι ετε]ροι: = A Q V Y 22 26 36 42 51 62 68 87 91 95 97 106 130 147 153 185 198 228 233 534 Compl. Others transpose or omit one.
 $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$ [$\overline{o \theta\varsigma}$]: the addition of $\overline{o \theta\varsigma}$ is required by space and is found in Boh; Ach and Sah do not exist for this portion.

- IV, 1 πτωχους [πεν]ητας: words are transposed in A Q 26 49 106 198 233 407 410 534 764, and seemingly in Boh. [ημιν]: + οινων man 2: = Arm.
- 2 [διο]τι: A 87* 130 311 read οτι. [υποκειμενο][υς εμβολουσιν]: omit A Q* 26 40 49 106 233 410 Compl Mass. [κς + ο θς]: addition required by space, found only in Mass.
- 3 ραμμαν: I find this spelling reported only for MS 198; it is a little indistinct in W. [κς ο θς]: although in lacuna this reading is practically certain. It is supported by A Q 26 36 40 42 46 86^{mg} 106 198 233 239 403 407 410 711 Compl.
- 4 [εισηλ]θατε: against εισηλθετε of Q*Y 22 36 40 42 48 49 51 91 95 130 153 185 311 403 407 410 490 534 710 711 Compl. βεθηλ: this spelling is reported for V 26 62 86 130 147 311 538 Boh. η[νομησατε]: I so restored with A Q Lucianic MSS and a few others, but probably wrongly, as the nearer relatives of W read ησεβησατε. εις πρωι: the article is omitted also by 40 Compl Boh; cf. 93. τριτην ημερα[υ]: = Symmachus (cf. 86^{mg}) Boh.
- 5 απα[γγ]ειλατ[ε]: = A Q* Y 22 26 36 40 42 46 48 49 51 62 86 95 106 114 147 185 233 239 403 407 410 534 711 Compl. ιμησατε man 1 is for ημησατε (ye have reaped), which seems out of place here. ηγαπησατε of man 2 is an adaptation to the Hebrew. As both first and second hands have the second person followed by the vocative, it is probable that the parent MS had the correction written above and the first scribe misread it, so that we have really but one reading here. There seems no valid reason for the deletion of ταυτα, so that correction perhaps comes from a later hand. — οι: the omission is necessary as υιοι is here vocative; yet 91 153 239 410 490 Compl agree, though they do not have the second person of the verb. It seems a remnant of the same old error.
- 7 τρυγητου: against θερισμου of Aquila, Symmachus, Theodotion = Q^{mg} 86^{mg} 62 147 153 and Lucianic MSS.

- βρεξω³: omit επ αυτον of A Q 26 40 42 49 106 198 240 534. ξηρανθησονται: the plural is an unsupported error due to accommodation to the following verb.
ουκ επιιστρευετε: the future finds no support.
- 10 υμων (for σου): this makes the pronouns consistent in the verse and agrees with the Hebrew. It is supported only by 40 86* Compl Boh Arm Hieronymus.
*υμων*³: = B V Q^{mg} 87* 91* 130 239 311 490 538 Compl (40 42 114?).
- 12 [ιηλ + πλην] οτι ουτως ποιησω σ[οι]: this is repetition from the previous line and may have come in by comparison with some MS which had the phrase in wrong order; cf. the omission in 95 185.
- 13 [διοτι ιδου εγω]: no omission is possible here, so W probably agrees with A B^c Q and most cursive MSS.
π[οιων]: B alone has the article.
κ[αι επιβα]ινων: only B 239 omit και.
- V, 1 The text in this lacuna is supplied from Q 46 86 711 etc. and agrees well with the space, but I would not defend it.
 2 αυτης: B alone has αυτου. Several omit.
 3 διοτι: B has δια τουτο.
κς̄ [κς̄]: there is perhaps room for the second κς̄ found in most MSS. If we suppose the letters a little more spaced, thirteen would fill the lacuna. There are thirteen letters missing in the line above and fifteen in the line below. That would allow the omission of κς̄² as in MSS 40 86 62-147 153 95-185 and in the Lucianic so often related to W.
 4 ζησατε: this may be compared with ζησετε of 40 Compl which W² also has. All other MSS have ζησεσθε.
 5 βαιθηλ is the spelling here twice, as in the best MSS.
αναβαινετε: = A Q 26 42 49 95 106 114 153 198 233 240 407 410 534.
 — ως: = 22 48 51 62 147* 233.

καταφαγετα[ι]: = A Q 26 49 68 97 106 198 233 410 534 538 Ald.
 7 ιη[λ ο ποιων]ν: = B V 87* 91 130 311 490 Compl (40 68 95 97 114 185?). There is no room for an addition.

- 8 ποιων: W omits the article with A Q* 26 49 106 198 233 410 534.
σκιαν θανατου: = Q^{ms} 22 36 42 48 51 62 68 86 87 91 95 97 114 130 147 153 185 228 239 240 310 311 etc. Cf. also Hieronymus who translates the Hebrew "umbra mortis." The uncials have little support in omitting θανατου.
πασης (της γης): = 26 42 Boh Athanasius, ad Psalm. 32, 7, Theodoret., ibid.
(κς) ο θς παντοκρατωρ: only B V 130 311 (40 310?) omit.
9 επ (for επι): = B Q* 22 36 48.
11 εις κεφαλαις πτωχων: = A Q* 26 49 86^{ms} 106 198 233 239 534 Boh. και ([αμ]πελων[ας]): = A Q V 26 49 106 233 403 407 410 534. φυτευετε: = A (Q*) 42 49 106 198 233 240 403 534 Boh Cyril Alex.

εξ: = B Q 42 46 86 130 311 538 711; others omit.
12 καταπατουσαι: = B Q^{ms} 130 239 311. Q^{ms} adds οι ο (the Septuagint).
αλλαγματα: B (239) 407 ανταλλαγματα; V Y 22 86 (240), ανταλαγμα.
πενητας: Q* 40 42 233 Compl Arm, πενητα.
13 I have supplied the lacune [*π*ονη[ρος]] with the majority of the MSS; the genitive plural would crowd the space as ω always takes more room.
15 υμας (κς): this addition is found only in the margin of 86, where it is not referred to the other translations. It is not found in the Hebrew and there is a lacuna in Ach, the usual supporter of W in rare readings.
περιλοιπους αυτους (for τους περιλοιπους): this seems the result of an attempted correction in the parent. The pronoun should have been the substitute for the whole object, but both were inserted with the omission of the article. There is no other MS authority for either change.
ιωσηφ: the omission of the article is supported only by Compl. It may have been caused by the insertion of αυτους just discussed.

the last two phrases were in apposition.

ημαθ: this spelling is found in 46 86* 407 711.

διελθετε (for καταβητε): cf. Q^a 86^{ms} Boh. This error was due to a transposition of the previous διελθατε phrase, as in Q, but when that was restored in its proper place, the repetition crowded out the following phrase, as in W and 86^{ms}.

3 [ερ]χομενοι: the essential letter is missing; I have restored with most MSS.

 $\overline{\pi\upsilon\rho\omega}$ (perhaps $\overline{\pi\upsilon\rho\bar{\omega}}$): man 1 seems at once to have recognized as a gloss and partly erased; then man 2 deleted. It was suggested by the comparison of sifting the people with a sieve (as grain); the thought would come to one reading the Greek quite as readily as if he were comparing the Hebrew. The long insertion $\tau\alpha\ \overline{\pi\epsilon\pi\tau\omega\kappa\omicron\tau\alpha}$ $\overline{\alpha\nu\omicron\iota\kappa\omicron\delta\omicron\mu\eta\sigma\omega}$ $\overline{\delta\omicron\mu\eta\sigma\omega}$ comes from verse 11. It had been omitted there in some MS by homoioteleuton and when supplied in the margin was misplaced. It seems deleted here by a decidedly later hand, probably the reader who compared some passages with the Hebrew.

 (εν φραγω) πληθος: this error together with the preceding one seems traceable to a misunderstanding of the Hebrew, which reads “daughter of troops” for daughter of Ephraim.
 Those mss which omit the characterization of the daughter, should have carried over the word with proper interpretation “troops” to the following verb, as Ach and πληθος in W; yet no other mss support. This explanation makes the text in W a doublet, and εφρεμ, because of its spelling, is probably the insert. Ach is also a doublet, but there one of the phrases has crowded out the equivalent of εν φραγω.

- (εν) δε: there is no support for this conjunction.
παταξει: only Theodotion has the singular of the verb, but differs in the rest of the sentence. The singular in W as well as the preceding conjunction is probably due to the carrying on of the subject πληθος discussed above. These may all have appeared in Theodotion, but we do not know it.

της οφας συνεσπερα man 1: the verb was understood as σὺν ἐσπέρα already in the parent MS as shown by the gloss της οφας (for οφιας) which has crept into the text; the second hand deleted and corrected to the verb συνεσπειρας, with which we may compare Ach OL Mass and Vulg; all other Greek MSS have συνεπερανας.

- 15 οναι: = 410 (Ach) Boh (106^c); cf. Origen Cyril Alex.
 επι τα σπηλαια αυτων was enclosed in brackets by man 3 and so omitted. He was probably dissatisfied with it as an interpretation of the Hebrew, for σπηλαια means caverns generally, while Ach and Vulg, as well as modern translations, interpret the Hebrew word as "nakedness." The omission makes πλησμονην object of επιβλεπη. Thus ατιμια ος begins a new sentence (a dishonor is he who is from glory). Perhaps the whole trouble came from a dittography by the first hand, ατιμιαας for ατιμιας. N and Ach support ατιμια but there is nothing similar to the pronoun following.

I believe it is necessary to assume from this not only that Hieronymus thought επι αγνοηματων the proper translation for the Hebrew but also that Aquila used this form. Symmachus or Quinta or both may have varied the word, if the general sense was the same. It is clear that the form in W was considered at that time a possible translation for the Hebrew; it may have come direct or through the medium of an earlier translation, preferably Symmachus.

- 2 ακοην man 1: = all Greek MSS; it is not deleted but man 2 adds above φωνην which is parallel to Achmimic. It should therefore be considered an interpretative gloss and may indicate that the Achmimic Version was known in the home of W.

that tradition. The omission in W V 449 was due to homoioteleuton (και ουκ to και ουκ) and was the original error. Either Origen's guiding MS had lost two words more or he misplaced his critical marks.

456 490 534 538 544 710 (40 68 114 153 310?); man 3 adds in the margin εκλεκτην, which must be a gloss or correction to these Greek words; it is drawn from Mass directly or indirectly; compare Vulg and Ach, but not Boh.
- 10 — προσδεξομαι εν διεσπαρμενοις μου with all except N B V 87 490 538 (40 42 68 114 153 240?); many insert a substitute, which is marked with an asterisk in 22 97 and is therefore from Origen and presumably from Theodotion.
W man 1 inserts δεομενοι μου εν τοις διεσκορπισμενοις, but it is omitted by the same hand or the diorthotes through dots placed over each letter. It was certainly a marginal gloss in the parent MS and was so recognized by the corrector. Symmachus is quoted for a different form by Theodoretus, so it seems best to derive the gloss either direct from the Hebrew or from Aquila.

μεγαλευχθαι man 3: this is only an error in spelling, but knew.

επι ορον man 1: επι ορος man 2: the corrector knew from the parent MS or from comparison with another, that ορος was right, yet he seems to have thought it was a nominative and for that reason changed the preposition. This does not compare with the knowledge of Greek regularly shown by the first corrector. The change may have been made by an early reader. It is in lighter ink and well written.

UNPLACED FRAGMENTS

Immediately following the text I have printed the letters read on all the unplaced fragments, which seem from the character of the writing to belong to the Minor Prophets. These fragments are shown on pages 1 and 2 of the Facsimile Edition. Certain small fragments are there included which seem to have come from the binding, though containing no legible text.

On the last two unnumbered pages of the Facsimile are collected certain fragments, which seem in a different hand and from another work. They are very dim and I have been able to make little out of them. They have been published in the Facsimile, since it may later be found that some are to be placed in the Minor Prophets, and also in order that scholars may have a chance to help in identifying them. The reading is in all cases so doubtful that I have not ventured to print the text of the fragments, but as an assistance towards identifying the work, I give below my tentative reading of the largest fragment.

PART II

THE BERLIN FRAGMENT OF GENESIS

I. HISTORY OF THE MANUSCRIPT

IN the spring of 1906 Professor Carl Schmidt learned from a dealer in Cairo that he had been shown a papyrus in Achmîm, but had declined to buy it because of its illegible condition. Neither had he determined whether the papyrus contained a Greek or a Coptic text. As Professor Schmidt was on the point of visiting Upper Egypt with a friend, Privy Councillor Moritz, at that time Director of the Khedival Library in Cairo, he went directly to Achmîm. The papyrus was found in the possession of a dealer in antiquities and the communication of the Cairo dealer was in the main confirmed.

In a small tin box lay two masses of papyrus, in which the leaves were closely pressed and stuck together in consequence of moisture and the length of time during which it had been buried in the earth. In such a case there was no possibility of determining the amount of text contained, but even the first glance brought the discovery that a Greek text of Genesis, written in a very ancient cursive hand, lay hidden in the fragmentary mass of papyrus. The decision to purchase was made at once and, as the dealer's price was low because of the hopeless condition of the fragment, Professor Schmidt was able to buy it on his own account.

On the return to Germany the treasure was given to the Royal Library, now Staatsbibliothek, in Berlin, and accepted by His Excellency von Harnack, General Director of the Royal Libraries at that time, as an exceptionally valuable addition to the manuscript treasures of the Library. In presenting the papyrus to the Library the only reservation made by Professor Schmidt was that the right of publication should remain under his control, without however promising that he would personally or immediately undertake the editing. It was his wish that this oldest witness to the Septuagint text of Genesis might be published by a scholar interested in Septuagint studies and that he himself might share in deciphering the original and in the consideration of the palæographical problems involved.

At the Library the unrolling of the papyrus was intrusted to the expert hands of Dr. Hugo Ibscher of the Papyrus Division of the Berlin Museums, and thanks to his wonderful skill the mass of papyrus was soon unfolded and the fragmentary leaves made accessible for study. The fragments, united into thirty leaves, were mounted between plates of glass and are now preserved in the Staatsbibliothek, where the manuscript bears the accession number, Graec. Fol. 66, I, II. In the lists of Rahlfs, Septuaginta-Unternehmen, Band 2, the number is 911.

Although Coptic studies primarily occupied the attention of Professor Schmidt, he finished copying the papyrus and made progress in the tedious task of determining the proper variants to fit the countless lacunae. The publication was planned for the Berlin Classical Texts, published by the General Management of the Royal Museums in Berlin, in which in 1910 Professors C. Schmidt and W. Schubart published in volume II the remnants of Early Christian literature in Greek, possessed by the Royal Museums of Berlin. When however in 1908 Professor A. Rahlfs had been shown the papyrus through the kindness of His Excellency von Harnack and had requested that the publication of it be intrusted to him, he was invited by Professor Schmidt to share in the publication of this most important Septuagint text, which should still appear in the above-mentioned volume. Unfortunately for the early publication of the Genesis Papyrus Professor Rahlfs declined this invitation, as he was interested only in a separate publication by himself.

The plan to publish the Genesis fragment therefore remained dormant, as it could not be made ready for the volume planned, and immediately thereafter Professor Schmidt's time was fully occupied with the publication of the "Sayings of Jesus to His Disciples after the Resurrection."¹

When in the summer of 1922 Mr. Sanders visited Berlin while engaged in study preliminary to the publication of the Papyrus of the Minor Prophets contained in this volume, he was shown the Genesis Fragment by Professor Schmidt, and later, after the similarity of the problems involved in the study of these two third-century papyri of the Septuagint had become evident, he was offered the opportunity of sharing in the publication as co-editor with the understanding that the two papyri appear in the same volume.

Mr. Sanders did not at first see his way clear to accept this offer, since the publication of the Minor Prophets' papyrus had been arranged and at least two years more time would be necessary for the work.

Later in Göttingen Professor A. Rahlfs learned of the offer and strongly urged the acceptance of the plan of co-editorship and publication of this most important Septuagint text. The matter was then taken up earnestly with Professor Kelsey, Editor of the University of Michigan Studies, and with Dean Lloyd of the Graduate School of the University of Michigan and, because of the evident unity of the problems and the strengthening of the evidence of both papyri by a joint publication, additional financial support was offered from the Freer Research and Publication Fund, and Volume XXI of the Studies was enlarged so as to contain the Berlin Genesis also.

In the spring of 1923 photographs were made of the Genesis fragment and, because of the Ruhr incident, which made communication with France uncertain, these were sent to Turin, where Mr. Sanders found them on his arrival. During the early summer time was found to make a complete copy of the photographs, and during August, 1923, this was compared with Professor Schmidt's copy and with the original manuscript in Berlin. Time did not suffice for handling all the difficult questions which arose, but the substantial agreement of the two copies was established and a working plan for the publication of the text agreed upon.

By the summer of 1925 Mr. Sanders had finished a typewritten copy of the Genesis text with all lacunae supplied. A carbon copy of this was sent to Professor Schmidt and compared by him with the original. Changes and comments were added in the margin, particularly in the case of readings showing signs of correction in the original manuscript. The corrected copy was returned to Mr. Sanders and again compared with the photographs. On some points, where difference of opinion still remained, Professor Schubart kindly examined the original.

On the basis of these studies the text of the Genesis Fragment was made ready for the printer, but was again compared with the photographs by Mr. Sanders and with the Papyrus by Professor Schmidt while reading the proof. It is hoped that the text will be found to properly reproduce the original.

A Facsimile Edition of the Papyrus appears at the same time as this volume, also combined with the Papyrus of the Minor Prophets.

II. PALAEOGRAPHY

I. MATERIAL AND FORM OF MANUSCRIPT, AND WRITING

THE manuscript was written on sheets of papyrus of not better than average quality, but of good size. Originally there were sixteen double sheets, measuring about 36 by 25 cm. (14 by 10 inches). These were laid in one pile and folded so as to produce a single quire of 32 leaves. The outside double sheet served as a cover and was written only on the inside of the first leaf. It is now lost. Each page was numbered, a fashion Coptic rather than Greek, as is indicated by a Ξ at the top of the next to the last page. Distinguishable remnants of $\text{N}\Gamma$ on page 53 and of $(\text{N})\text{Z}$ on page 57 show that the numbering was continuous on all written pages. It began on the inside of the first leaf.

There are holes made by sewing the leaves through the middle, but the irregularity of the columns of writing proves that binding was not well understood. If it was originally planned to bind the quire, the inexperience or awkwardness of the scribe made it difficult. Books of a single quire were not uncommon in the earlier period. The subject has been discussed above on page 7, to which the reader is referred. In the case of small books, as this part of Genesis, the form should not have presented any serious difficulty.

There are no signs of ruling, and the irregularity both of columns and lines proves that there was none. Of the 30 single leaves preserved the first 9 are written in double columns, each about 3 by 8 1-2 inches (7.5 by 21.5 cm.). As the space between the columns as well as more or less of the line ends adjoining is everywhere lost, the width of the columns can only be approximated. The irregularity of the columns occasioned considerable variation in the length of the lines. The number of letters in a line seems to vary between 17 and 35. Usually the lines incline to be shorter in the first column on a page than in the second. The scribe seems to have been very liberal with his margins at first, but later, particularly from the fourteenth page on, gradually to have lengthened the lines. He doubtless discovered early that his papyrus was not likely to suffice.

The number of lines in a column varies between 28 and 37. The most common numbers are from 30 to 32. In only three cases are there the same number of lines in the two columns on the same page; yet the difference between the two columns of a page is never more than two lines. The twelve exceptionally long columns, 33 to 37 lines, fall on six consecutive pages.

With page 19 the scribe changed to a single column, having lines exceptionally long and crowded. There can be little doubt that he was striving to copy a definite amount of text on a limited amount of papyrus. The column measures from 6 1-2 to nearly 7 inches (16 to 17.5 cm.) in width and from 8 1-2 to 9 inches (21.5 to 23 cm.) in height. The smaller size is much the more common. The number of letters in a line varies from 42 to 67, but there are generally between 50 and 60 letters to the line. Here also we notice a tendency to lengthen and crowd the lines as the scribe progressed with his work. The number of lines in a column varies between 28 and 34; the most common numbers are 29 to 32.

Irregularity in the length of the line was not seemingly due to the desire to follow set rules for word division, for we sometimes find most arbitrary divisions, as the following: του/ς αστερας, page 2, a, line 6; αν/α, 2, a, 12; εγν/ωσαν, 5, a, 7; εκτησ/αμην, 6, a, 24; μαθουσ/αλα, 7, a, 25; εζησε/ν, 8, a, 12; εγε/ννοντο, 8, a, 16; νετ/ον, 11, a, 25; υπ/οκατω, 12, a, 19; σαρ/ξ, 12, a, 13; π/αντων, 12, a, 30; κεκοπ/ακεν, 12, b, 16; με/τ αυτου, 13, a, 22; υμο/ιν, 13, b, 26; υμω/ν, 14, a, 8; π/ρος, 14, a, 13; καλα/χ, 15, a, 27; ιν/α, 16, a, 32; ν/αχωρ, 17, b, 3; αβρα/μ, 18, a, 23; σ/αυη, 20, 16; με/τ αυτου, 39, 11; εω/ς, 42, 14; τη/ν, 53, 25. The scribe seems to have separated σ from following consonants and generally also κ, yet note 51, 7, νυ/κτα. Compound words are not often divided at the compound, yet note προσ/ηγγισεν, 58, 18, and προσ/εσχεν, 59, 12. These are the only variations from the regular rule, though some of the irregularities noted above may be considered due to treating preposition and noun or even article and noun as a single complex. Compare also ου/χ ευρεν, 55, 2. In five other cases in lacuna false division has been assumed, though the omission of a single consonant was, perhaps, the more natural explanation.

The division at the line ends is much more carefully made after the scribe changed to a single column on the page, but this may be due to his gradually learning the system more thoroughly. Less than 25 unexplained peculiarities in a book of this length is not extreme, so that there can be no doubt that the scribe understood the common system of division.

The ink is dark brown and very clear except on pages that have suffered much from decay.

The writing is an early cursive, showing considerable variation in style, but by the same hand throughout. There is less linking and the letters are much less crowded in the early pages than towards the end. Haste and the desire to complete the text within a limited number of pages combined to produce a very closely written hand. It may be safely dated toward the end of the third century A. D., both on the general appearance of the hand and on the form of such letters as π , made with a single stroke, the frequent use of the small σ , and the β either with an open bottom or with a straight stroke crossing at the bottom. Both forms of κ occur, but the angular, book hand κ is the more common and presents a considerable variety of types. The tendency to replace the angle at the right with a curve is notable. Instances of confusion of κ with $\iota\sigma$ show that the parent manuscript had the same form at times. The great variety in the forms of the letters and in the manner of linking is difficult to describe and must be seen to be understood. Good samples of the more cursive type of the writing are given in Plates VI and VII.

2. ABBREVIATIONS

Of the regular Church abbreviations we find only $\overline{\theta\varsigma}$ and $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$, but these are used in all cases of the singular without regard to meaning; cf. $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$ in its various cases used of a man to mean lord or master in the following verses: 24, 37, 39, 48, 49; 27, 29; 31, 35; 32, 5, 18; 33, 8, 13, 14. The plurals are not abbreviated; compare $\kappa\upsilon\rho\iota\omicron\iota$, 19, 2, and $\theta\epsilon\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$, 31, 30 and 32. In 21, 33 $\theta\epsilon\omicron\varsigma$ occurs unabbreviated.

A different form of abbreviation was used for $\kappa\acute{\upsilon}\rho\iota\omicron\varsigma$ in some instances. For the nominative we find $\overline{\kappa\nu}$, probably abbreviation by suspension, eight times: 5, 29; 7, 5, 16; 9, 26; 11, 5, 9; 12, 7; 18, 12, and originally written but corrected to $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$ in five other places: 2, 22; 3, 14, 23; 4, 6; 18, 13. In 18, 31 $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ was written for $\kappa\nu$, but corrected, and probably in 24, 48 $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ stands for $\overline{\kappa\omega}$. With these we may compare $\overline{\iota\eta}$ for $\iota\eta\sigma\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ in Oxy. Pap. 1079 and 1224. All of these abbreviations

PLATE V

Fragment of a manuscript page containing several lines of text in a cursive script, likely a form of Greek or Latin. The text is heavily obscured by significant damage, including large holes and missing sections, particularly in the lower half of the fragment. The visible portions of the script are difficult to decipher due to the extent of the damage.

PAGE 50, ZACHARIAH iii, 4-iv, 7.

are indicated by a stroke above the letters. A similar stroke, varying much in length and even in form at times, is found often in the manuscript. Most often it is an abbreviation stroke, marking the omission of a single letter, medial as well as final. In 139 cases it is for omitted ν ; in 55 cases it stands for σ ; in 14 for ι ; in 12 for ν ; in 7 for ρ ; in 3 each for α and η ; in 2 for μ and in one for ω .

In some 30 places this stroke seems best explained as a breathing and in two or three cases we have so printed it, as there seems to be a slight upward turn at the beginning of the stroke. This must however be accidental in view of the number of times that it appears in identical form with the abbreviation stroke. The scribe had no intention of differentiating. In only one case, $\bar{\alpha}\bar{\delta}\bar{\alpha}\bar{\mu}$, 3, 20, is it possible to refer the mark to a smooth breathing, and the presence of the second mark makes this explanation unlikely. This case will be considered under accent.

In 40 cases the simple stroke replaces the apostrophe after a word ending in a consonant; 38 of these are on the name $\iota\alpha\kappa\omega\beta$, one on $\alpha\beta\rho\alpha\alpha\bar{\mu}$ and one on $\mu\epsilon\theta$ in 35, 2.

In six cases: 11, 7, $\overline{\phi\omega\nu\eta\varsigma\ \tau\omicron\upsilon}$; 17, 6, $\overline{\alpha\nu\xi\alpha\nu\bar{\omega}}$; 24, 48, $\overline{\lambda\alpha\beta\epsilon\iota\nu}$; 28, 17, $\overline{\tau\omicron\upsilon\tau\omicron}$; 31, 42, $\overline{\tau\omega\nu}$, the stroke may represent a circumflex accent. In six other cases it corresponds to a grave accent: 3, 20, $\bar{\alpha}\bar{\delta}\bar{\alpha}\bar{\mu}$ (see also below); 10, 11, $\overline{\tau\eta\nu\ \nu\iota\nu\epsilon\nu\eta}$; 17, 7, $\overline{\tau\eta\nu}$; 18, 14, $\overline{\sigma\bar{\epsilon}}$; 24, 22, $\overline{\omicron\lambda\kappa\eta}$. There are only two cases that can be interpreted as acute accents: 9, 6, $\overline{\epsilon\pi\omicron\iota\eta\sigma\alpha}$, where the mark looks much like a circumflex, and 13, 2, $\overline{\pi\lambda\omicron\upsilon[\sigma\iota\omicron\varsigma]}$ which I now explain as omitted σ ($\overline{\pi\lambda\omicron\upsilon\iota\omicron\varsigma}$). The mark was not used as an acute accent.

There are 15 cases where this stroke stands over unaccented syllables and seemingly has no other force except to note that fact. This use combines with a grave accent on a few words, as might be expected. The cases are: 3, 20, $\bar{\alpha}\bar{\delta}\bar{\alpha}\bar{\mu}$; 11, 13, $\overline{\epsilon\tau\eta}$; 11, 15, $\overline{\epsilon\tau\eta}$; 17, 5, $\overline{\pi\alpha\tau\epsilon\rho\alpha}$; 17, 6, $\overline{\sigma\phi\omicron\delta\rho\alpha}$; 17, 20, $\overline{\delta\omega\delta\epsilon\kappa\alpha\ \epsilon\theta\nu\eta}$; 18, 18, $\overline{\epsilon\theta\nu\eta}$; 19, 2, $\overline{\kappa\nu\rho\iota\omicron\iota}$; 19, 4, $\overline{\omicron\iota\kappa\iota\alpha\nu}$; 24, 43, $\overline{\epsilon\iota\pi\bar{\omega}}$; 29, 15, $\overline{\mu\omicron\iota\ \tau\iota}$ ($\tau\iota$ is for $\tau\iota\varsigma$, but the stroke begins over $\mu\omicron\iota$; probably two strokes were run together); 31, 42, $\overline{\chi\epsilon\iota\rho\bar{\omega}}$. For this system of accents see Kenyon, Pal. of Greek Pap. pp. 29 f. Cf. also 35.5, $\overline{\sigma\iota\kappa\iota\mu\bar{\omega}\nu}$.

There remain some unexplained strokes: 19, 2, $\overline{\pi\bar{\omicron}\delta\bar{\alpha}\bar{\varsigma}}$; 27, 15, $\overline{\lambda\bar{\alpha}\beta\bar{\omicron}\nu\bar{\omicron}\sigma\bar{\alpha}\ \rho\bar{\epsilon}\bar{\beta}\bar{\epsilon}\bar{\kappa}\bar{\kappa}\bar{\alpha}}$; 29, 27, $\overline{\pi\rho\epsilon\sigma\bar{\beta}\nu\tau\epsilon\rho\bar{\alpha}\nu\ \sigma\bar{\nu}\nu}$; 30, 9, $\overline{\alpha\upsilon\tau\eta\varsigma}$ (the first stroke might show an unaccented syllable and the second a circumflex accent; such a combination has no support); 31, 5, $\overline{\epsilon\kappa\theta\epsilon\varsigma}$ (very doubtful); 32, 24, $[\overline{\kappa\alpha\iota}] \overline{\epsilon\pi\alpha\lambda\alpha\iota\epsilon\nu}$. Some of these strokes can be forced under the accent system, but the others look like marks of emphasis or idle strokes of a reader noting words that took his attention. There are some strokes, more often apostrophes, which seem used to separate successive vowels or consonants, as 16, 1, $\overline{\epsilon\tau\iota\kappa\tau\epsilon'} \overline{\alpha\upsilon\tau\omega}$; 24, 22, $\overline{\eta\gamma\iota\kappa\alpha'} \overline{\epsilon\pi}$ —; 24, 38, $\overline{\alpha\lambda\lambda'} \overline{\eta'} \overline{\epsilon\iota\varsigma}$; 31, 13, $\overline{\omicron\phi\epsilon\iota\varsigma}$ $\overline{\sigma\omicron\iota}$. Professor Schmidt would use this explanation oftener and also refer some cases to the parent Ms.

In three cases the strokes above the letters are accompanied by strokes below and plainly indicate deletion. The passages are: 4, 6; 9, 15; 32, 7. In three other cases, $\overline{\omicron\iota\kappa\eta\sigma\epsilon\tau\alpha\iota}$, 31, 32, $\overline{\pi\alpha\tau\epsilon\beta\omicron\lambda\alpha\iota}$, 32, 2, $\overline{\beta\omicron\theta\varsigma}$, 32, 15, the stroke appears above manifest errors, to which they doubtless call attention. These also should be referred to the parent manuscript and considered the work of a reader rather than the invention of a scribe. In $\overline{\iota\epsilon\kappa\tau\alpha\nu}$, 10, 26 and $\overline{\iota\omega\sigma\eta\phi}$, 32, 2, the stroke is a substitute for the diæresis.

There remain a few abbreviations to be discussed: 14, 15, $\overline{\nu\kappa}$ (= $\overline{\nu\kappa\tau\alpha}$); 17, 2, $\overline{\theta}$ (= $\overline{\theta\eta\sigma\omega}$ or $\overline{\theta\eta\sigma\omicron\mu\alpha\iota}$); 28, 7, $\overline{\epsilon\pi\omicron\rho\epsilon}$ (= $\overline{\epsilon\pi\omicron\rho\epsilon\upsilon\theta\eta}$); 29, 24, $\overline{\iota\delta}$ (= $\overline{\iota\delta\omicron\upsilon}$); 25, 8, $\overline{\pi\lambda}$ for $\overline{\pi\lambda\eta\rho\eta\varsigma}$ ($\overline{\rho\eta\varsigma}$ added above by first hand; therefore listed rather as omitted η). These are all cases of abbreviation by suspension, as $\overline{\kappa\upsilon}$ discussed above, and were derived from business cursive. In two cases the scribe has written an unintelligible ϵ , where the article is needed: 13, 15, $\epsilon^1 \overline{\alpha\iota\omega\nu\omicron\varsigma}$ for $\overline{\tau\omicron\upsilon}$ $\overline{\alpha\iota\omega\nu\omicron\varsigma}$ and 28, 2, $\overline{\epsilon\iota\varsigma} \epsilon \overline{\mu\epsilon\sigma\omicron\pi\omicron\tau\alpha\mu\iota\alpha\nu}$ for $\overline{\epsilon\iota\varsigma} \overline{\tau\eta\nu} \overline{\mu\epsilon\sigma\omicron\pi\omicron\tau\alpha\mu\iota\alpha\nu}$. In documents $\overline{\tau\omicron\upsilon}$ is frequently written $\overline{\tau}$ and $\overline{\tau\eta\nu}$, $\overline{\tau}$. A $\overline{\tau}$ thus written in a cursive original might easily be read as an ϵ .

3. PARAGRAPHS AND DIACRITICAL MARKS

There is no punctuation in the manuscript, but a few marks may be interpreted as paragraph marks. On page 41, line 14, there is a slightly curving mark just before the first letter of the line. This falls at the end of verse 30 of chapter 25 and there is a sense break before $\overline{\delta\iota\alpha}$ of the previous line, but also after $\overline{\epsilon\delta\omega\mu}$, the second word of this line, and the verse end comes at that point.

Fragment of ancient papyrus with handwritten text in a cursive script. The text is arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines. The script is dense and appears to be a form of Greek or Latin cursive. The fragment is irregularly shaped with torn edges. The text is mounted on a light-colored background.

Fragment of an ancient Greek papyrus scroll, likely containing text from the Bible. The text is written in a cursive script and is heavily damaged, with significant portions missing and the remaining text appearing as dark, irregular shapes against the lighter background of the papyrus. The fragment is oriented vertically on the page.

a cursive π and I have so read it (cf. footnote), though there was no call for π in the text opposite. The end of the first verse of chapter 26 falls in the previous line, so this π could stand for παράγραφος.

On page 44, l. 10 (27, 6) above the first word but extending into the margin is a straight line. Direct discourse begins just before the end of the previous line. Cf. also mark before line 15.

On page 45 at line 22 (27, 31) there is a straight mark in the margin that corresponds with a paragraph, and another between lines 25 and 26 which marks the beginning of verse 33. These seem certain cases of paragraph marks.

On page 47, l. 25, there is a very indistinct mark in the margin, which we have not ventured to print. There is a paragraph ending at 28, 15 in the middle of the previous line.

On page 53, l. 21 (31, 12) there looks to be a plain paragraph mark, yet, if so, it is one line too low.

On page 60, l. 13 (34, 17) there is a mark extending into the margin above ἄπελευσομεθα, which is the end of the verse. This seems placed too high. Two lines higher and near the end of the line there is a similar mark, which falls just at the end of verse 16. The mark comes over the last word of the verse, ἐν, and the first word of the next verse, ἐάν, so it could stand for a rough breathing or even for a mark showing lack of accent or grave accent on the second of the two words covered. However, it seems more likely that it was the sense division that was marked, and that it came at the beginning of a line in the parent manuscript. These few cases seem to prove the use of the paragraph mark, but the papyrus is much too fragmentary for one to be certain that its use was limited to the examples cited. It was not, however, extensively used.

The peculiar marks at the beginning of line 12, page 47, are probably line fillers, taken from the parent manuscript, but misplaced. Similarly shaped line fillers > > are found at the ends of the following lines: 13, b, ll. 6, 7, 9, 10; 21, 3; 24, 20 and 29; 25, 7; 47, 21.

An apostrophe in the form of a slanting or curving line over and after the last letter is used with proper nouns ending in a consonant. There are 52 cases of ιακωβ', to which must be added the 38 cases mentioned above, where the apostrophe looks like the abbreviation stroke. In 25 cases there is an apostrophe after αβρααμ' and 7 instances after μ at the end of other names. After κ there are 26 cases, all εισακ'; after λ 21 cases, mostly ραχηλ' and ισμαηλ'; after τ 5 cases; after θ and ϕ three each; after δ and χ two each and after γ and ρ one each. The use of the apostrophe is not invariable even in the case of the names most commonly taking it. In the case of other names the use is rather infrequent. At 27, 46 χετ' has two apostrophes.

Other words which take an apostrophe are ηλ'θον, 19, 1; φαραγ'γι, 26, 17; λαμ'βανοντα, 30, 41; ουχ', 34, 23, and perhaps ηνικα', 24, 22 (a word beginning with a vowel follows). These and similar uses are found in papyri and early parchment manuscripts. See above.

Two dots may be placed above initial iota or iota preceded by another vowel with which it does not form a diphthong. In the case of ιακωβ the dots were written over iota 100 times and there are only 9 cases, mostly indistinct, where they are omitted. Almost equal regularity is found in the word υιος, in all its cases, which shows the diæresis 78 times. Of ιδειν and similar forms from the same root there are 40 cases and of ινα 13 cases. In these words also the diæresis is rarely omitted. Most of the other cases are in proper nouns and are infrequent, as the words are themselves rare. In the case of ισμαηλ the dots are used seven times and omitted once. There seem to be no instances of irregular usage. As above mentioned a long stroke is used for the diæresis in two cases.

Initial upsilon has two dots above it frequently. Eleven instances of υμεις in its various cases are so marked. υδωρ with six cases is most nearly regular. Besides υπνος occurs three times, υδρευσατο and υπαρχοντα twice each, and υδριαν, υπακουσον, and υπολειφθητα once each. υιον, 24, 47, is the only case of both vowels marked in the same word. In 25, 17 ταυτα is irregular.

4. SPELLING, GRAMMATICAL FORMS, SCRIBAL ERRORS

Itacisms are fairly numerous. There are 106 cases of ει for ι and only 15 cases of the opposite change. In the case of some words as εισακ', αβειμελεκ', κειβωτος, κεινουμενον, this spelling was so regular that we have ventured to supply it in the lacunae. These cases were not included in the count. There are 14 cases of αι for ε and 11 of ε for αι. Initial ευ for ηυ occurs 7 times, ηυ being found but once. Other itacistic errors are less frequent. The enumeration follows: η for ει 6 times; ει for η 4 times; ι for η and η for ι once each; ι for ε three times; ει for οι, ι for υ, υ for ι, υ for ο, οι for ι, ε for η, η for ε, occur only once each.

The scribe does not seem to have distinguished omega and omicron well; there are 13 cases of ο for ω and 14 of ω for ο. Also $\overline{\eta\omega}$, 27, 32, is probably a pronunciation error and abbreviation, η(σ)ω for ησων.

There was a rather strong tendency to double consonants. Twenty cases of double for single consonants were found and only two of single for double. Similar consonants interchange rather often: κ for χ, 7 times, χ for κ, 6 times; ν for μ, 4 times, τ for δ, 10 times, δ for τ, 5 times, λ for ρ, 7 times, two of which were corrected, ρ for λ, 3 times, of which one was corrected, ζ for σ, twice, σ for ζ, once, θ for τ, twice, κ for γ, 4 times, and π for φ, once. In προσεκενήσα, 24, 48, the stroke above probably stands for ν, so the error was εν for υ. Probably κχ for χ, κξ for ξ, ξσ for κσ, ξ for κσ arose from sound errors. There is but one occurrence of each. κσ for ξ is found once.

There are a few cases of metathesis as τοδε for δοτε, in 34, 8, and απαθενων, in 25, 17. There are very few grammatical peculiarities. εαντω for σεαντω, 6, 14, has the support of one group of minuscules and is found elsewhere, Washington MS of the Gospels, Mark, 1, 44. χειραν for χειρα, 8, 9, σαρκαν for σαρκα, 9, 15, κτηνα for κτηνη 30, 43, παρθενην, 34, 3; αρσης for αρσην, 34, 24, and a few similar changes show the encroachment of the commoner declension forms on unusual stems. It had begun in the Ptolemaic period, cf. Mayser, Grammatik, p. 199. In the earlier portion of the manuscript θυγατερες is used regularly as accusative, so that we have even supplied it in the lacunae. Towards the end the scribe uses the correct form θυγατερας; it seems doubtful if he can be accused of intentionally using the nominative for the accusative, but he could not have known the declensions well. He probably wrote as he read and in a passage, where the word occurred often the error might persist, if he misread the first instance. Cf. βοες for βοας, 34, 28 and αναβαινοντες for αναβαινοντας, 31, 12.

There is little variation from the current text in the use of the so-called Alexandrian aorist. We note εφαγοσαν for εφαγον, 3, 8 and elsewhere, and εισηλθοσαν for εισηλθον, 34, 27, while the opposite change is found but once. The spelling ηραυνησεν is found in all instances except one, ηρευνησεν, 31, 35. Assimilation of consonants in compounds is avoided nine times, yet in 30, 41 the reading is εγ γαστρι. In 4, 25 καθ is read for κατ, and in 5, 1 we have supplied ογ[δακοσια]. The form λημφθη for λημψη in 28, 1 and 6, must be referred to pronunciation or bad grammar, as also επορευθεις, 27, 13, ποιησεν, 27, 14, and perhaps τ[ο]υ[τος], 24, 65. Errors in the use of augment occur in 17, 17 and 27, 13.

5. OTHER SCRIBAL ERRORS

There are a goodly number of scribal errors that point to the style of writing of the parent manuscript. Thus γ and σ are interchanged six times: 3, 24, γαλα for σαλα; 14, 9, τεσγαρ for τεσσαρες; 14, 10, εφυσεν for εφυγεν; 17, 19, γαρρα for σαρρα; 28, 12, εστηρισμενη for εστηριγμενη; 30, 30, σ̄α for γαρ; and probably 28, 4, γαρ for σοι as the ligature οι in cursive might be read αρ.

Five times τ and γ interchange: 16, 16, εγων for ετων; 25, 15, ιεγουρ for ιετουρ; 25, 30, τευσον for γευσον; 26, 13, μετας for μεγας; 30, 35, εκαστας for αιγας. The last example involves first a dittography (τας) ας αιγας, ας being then read as εκ and ι as σ. The attempt to produce a known Greek word out of the unintelligible original helped to cause the confusion, which was corrected by the first hand.

From these examples the interchange of σ and τ may be expected and it is found in the following words: 20, 16 and 23, 6, του for σου; 25, 25, σο δορα for το δορα; 32, 3, τηειρ for σηειρ. Cf. 15, 4, the doubtful reading δε for σε of parallel passage and 15, 7, δε for τε.

The interchange of α and ε is also easy in cursive writing. We may compare not only the frequent use of θυγατερες for θυγατερας mentioned above, but also 10, 26, ασερμωθ for ασαρμωθ; 14, 1, αμαραβελ for αμαρφαλ (also αβ for φ); 18, 16, καταβλεψαν for κατεβλεψαν; 24 61, εβραι for αβραι; 26, 20, ποιμενα for ποιμενες (σ was represented by abbreviation stroke and so neglected); 30, 37, ελαπισεν for ελεπισεν; 31, 12, αναβαινοντες for αναβαινοντας; 32, 31, ενετειλεν for ανετειλεν.

When ι and σ interchanged the σ must have been nearly a straight line as in early cursive. If the top stroke was prominent the confusion would be rather with γ and τ as cited above. Confusion with ι appears in 30, 41, τασς for ταις; 30, 35, εκαστας discussed above.

The interchange of θ and ε may also be referred to this source: 11, 9, συνεχθε for συνεχεεν: 33, 10, θυρηκα for ευρηκα; and perhaps εω for θες in 31, 37. So also θ and α: 32, 15, βοθς for βοας. The letters φ and ψ were often similar in first and second century cursive; cf. 24, 49, επιστρεφω for επιστρεψω; so also ν and ψ ; cf. 15, 5, αναβλενον for αναβλεψον.¹ For λ and α cf. 18, 17, λεγω for α εγω. Confusion between μ and β is possible in second century cursive; cf. 25, 2, ζεμραν for ζεβραν; 32, 2, παρεβπολαι for παρεμβολαι (sound error, π for β is also involved); 35, 4, τερεμινθον for τερεβινθον.

The ligatures in cursive cause errors both by reading two linked letters as one and by reading one letter as two. We may compare: 10, 27, δεδμα for δεκλα; 10, 30, σωφηφ for σωφηρα; 11, 30, ετακαιοποιει for ετεκνοποιει; 13, 14, διεσχωρισθηναι for διαχωρισθηναι; 18, 28, ελαστονειθωσιν for ελαττωνωθωσιν (both $\sigma\tau$ for $\tau\tau$ and $\epsilon\iota$ for ω); 23, 10, εκπορευομενων for εισπορευομενων; 24, 49, οis for ειs; 24, 56, ει for οi²; 24, 60, μυριαδαas for μυριαδων (aa for ω and ν expressed by the abbreviation stroke was misread σ); 25, 14, μαωση for μασση probably involves dittography first, μασσση; 25, 18, ευπλατ for ευειλατ; 25, 31, μαι for μοι; 26, 5, νκαιωματα for δικαιωματα; 26, 11, αγιτομενος for αποτομενος; 26, 34, ευλων for αιλωμ; 27, 19, ησου for ησαν; 29, 3, απεκνονον for απεκνλιον; 29, 7, εστι for ετι ($\sigma\tau$ was a close ligature, so if the top of τ was curved down at the left, it might be misread as the ligature); 30, 31, παν for παλιν (doubtless read πανν and one ν omitted); 30, 32, εστω for εσται; 30, 33, ναλευκον for διαλευκον; 31, 19, ειδωκα for ειδωλα (cf. the ligature ωλ); 31, 8, εδει for εαν (δ for α was an older error, which caused ν to be read as two letters); 31, 21, γαλαμ for γαλααδ; 31, 27, μονοικων for μουσικων (only in linked letters do οι and σι look alike); 32, 31, ηνος for ηλιος; 33, 9, εσται for εστω; 34, 30, ονοστος for ολιγοστος (ν was read for λι, but the γ was omitted because of sound error or because represented by abbreviation stroke).

Without claiming that every one of these errors must be due to a cursive ancestor, there is nevertheless abundant proof of such an origin. Therefore some more awkward errors may be referred to the same source: 3, 6, καβ for και (probably it came at the end of a line and the line filler was read with ι); 10, 23, μοσολ for μοσοχ; 10, 26 ιαραχ for ιαραδ; 24, 23, ουτην for αυτην; 25, 20, ρεβεκκαη for ρεβεκκαν; 25, 21, αs for εν (probably α for ϵ and abbreviation stroke read as σ); 26, 15, δ for α ; 28, 6, συ for ου; 28, 22, εστησο for εστησα; 30, 4, βαλλων for βαλλαν; 34, 28, πα for πολει (this involves an earlier error; α could arise from $\omicron\lambda$ and ν from $\epsilon\iota$ in cursive; $\pi\bar{\alpha}$ for $\pi\alpha\nu$ was the intermediate stage). Others are mentioned in the Notes.

² Cf. διελθεν for διελθον once in repeated passage, 15, 17.

The type of cursive to which the above errors point was that of the first and second century A.D., but that does not imply that the immediate ancestor of our papyrus was of that age. The last example discussed distinctly implies that there was an intermediate stage in some of the errors. A cursive tradition of Genesis may have been maintained for some time, and all of these errors do not need to be referred to a single copyist.

6. ABBREVIATIONS IN THE PARENT MANUSCRIPT

In the section on abbreviations we have already discussed the representation of single letters by an abbreviation stroke over the previous letter. The letters most often so represented are in order of frequency, ν , σ , ι , υ , ρ , α , η , and μ . Let us now examine the omission of single letters by our scribe, in order to see if these omissions point to a similar system of abbreviation in the parent manuscript. A rather hasty count of such omissions, where our papyrus stands alone or almost alone, gives the following results: ν , 54; σ , 24; ι , 8; υ , 5; ρ , 3; α , 3; μ , 2; λ , \omicron , and $\alpha\iota$, one each. It can not be due to mere chance that the frequency of these omissions corresponds so exactly with the use of the abbreviation marks for these letters.

If our scribe at times attempted to expand these abbreviations, errors might occur. This would furnish another explanation for the interchange of σ and ι , but not for σ and τ or for σ and γ , referred above to the influence of cursive writing. We may compare also 24, 22, $\omicron\lambda\eta\nu$ for $\omicron\lambda\eta\varsigma$; 28, 13, $\alpha\upsilon\tau\eta\nu$ for $\alpha\upsilon\tau\eta\varsigma$ and $\eta\nu$ for $\eta\varsigma$; 30, 3, $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\iota\alpha\kappa\eta$ for $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\iota\sigma\kappa\eta$; 15, 20, $\rho\alpha\phi\alpha\epsilon\tau$ for $\rho\alpha\phi\alpha\epsilon\upsilon\nu$, 32, 7, $\tau\omicron\nu$ for $\tau\omicron\nu$, and 35, 7, $\theta\upsilon\sigma\iota\alpha\sigma\tau\eta\rho\iota\omicron\nu$ for $\theta\upsilon\sigma\iota\alpha\sigma\tau\eta\rho\iota\omicron\nu$.

On the other hand we find more cases of letters wrongly inserted, which may be interpreted as false expansions of breathings, accents, etc., if the parent manuscript had the same confusion between the strokes marking these and the abbreviation strokes, which we find in our papyrus. There are 15 insertions of ν , some of which may be explained in this fashion; cf. $\epsilon\pi\lambda\eta\theta\upsilon\nu\epsilon\nu\ \tau\omicron$ for $\epsilon\pi\lambda\eta\theta\upsilon\nu\epsilon\tau\omicron$, 7, 17 (?); $\pi\lambda\eta\theta\upsilon\nu\omega\nu$ for $\pi\lambda\eta\theta\upsilon\nu\omega$, 17, 2; $\theta\eta\sigma\omicron\nu$ for $\theta\eta\sigma\omega$, i.e. $\theta\eta\sigma\bar{\omega}$, 17, 7; $\sigma\kappa\upsilon\eta\nu\eta$ for $\sigma\kappa\eta\nu\eta$, 18, 9; $\tau\omicron\nu\ \nu\alpha\kappa\rho\omicron\nu$ for $\tau\omicron\nu\ \alpha\gamma\rho\omicron\nu$, 23, 11; $\epsilon\theta\nu\eta$ for $\epsilon\tau\eta$, 25, 17; $\phi\iota\lambda\eta\nu\sigma\omicron\nu$ for $\phi\iota\lambda\eta\sigma\omicron\nu$, 27, 26; $\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon\lambda\theta\omega\nu$ for $\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon\lambda\theta\omega$, 29, 21; απηνητηνκα for απηνητηκα, 33, 8. These can all be explained as misreading of strokes inserted to show unaccented syllables, or grave or circumflex accent. οντι for ότι, 30, 1, shows a similar misinterpretation of a rough breathing.

There are seven insertions of σ and six of ι; examples are: 9, 10, πασης for παση; 13, 10, σοδομαι for σοδομα; 24, 7, ευδωσεις for ευδωσει; 29, 11, της φωνη for τη φωνη; 32, 13, εκοιμηθης for εκοιμηθη; 25, 13, ναιβαιωθ for ναβαιωθ; 29, 25, ριαχηλ for ραχηλ; 30, 38, ταις for τας. See Notes.

These simple explanations for so many errors seem sufficient to establish not only the cursive hand but also the system of abbreviations in the parent manuscript or even in the previous manuscript tradition. This is a real discovery, for all similar manuscripts have perished, yet the similarity of errors in certain of the minuscule groups as well as in D and E suggests that this tradition may have had a wider influence than this one manuscript. Also similar abbreviations may have been used outside of this tradition. I recall seven cases of κα for και and similar errors in W, a fourth century manuscript of the Gospels (Univ. of Mich. Studies, vol. IX, p. 25), which I formerly referred to bad pronunciation in reliance on Thackeray, p. 77. They may be more easily explained as arising from misunderstanding of κᾱ for και and similar uses of the abbreviation stroke. The consideration of this possibility will, I believe, show an extensive use of a system of abbreviation that was early abandoned.

The proof that the abbreviation system of Pap. 911 was derived from the parent manuscript and its use to explain omissions and interchanges of single letters suggests an extension of the system to omitted final syllables. We have noted on page 240 five or six instances of abbreviation by suspension. This kind of abbreviation, though rare, probably existed in the parent manuscript also, for it affords the best explanation for the following omissions: 14, 9, τεσγαρ (τεσσαρ) for τεσσαρες; 26, 3, ταν for ταυτη; 34, 5, εμια for εμιαεν; and θυγα for θυγατες, 34, 9. The indication of syllables by an abbreviation stroke must have been particularly puzzling to our scribe because of the inadequacy of his knowledge of Greek. If the system were more extensively used in the parent manuscript, it would be the best reason for the rather frequent omission of single syllables, but at present one hardly seems justified in extending this influence beyond the obvious cases just cited.

7. TEXT CORRECTIONS

There can still be read about 120 corrections in the text of the papyrus. There can be no doubt that many of these were made by the first hand while writing the manuscript. Others, as the correction of $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ to $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$, were made after the first pages had been written, but probably before the manuscript was finished. That is, when the scribe discovered his error, he looked back through the pages already written and corrected some earlier cases. The search was hastily made and more cases were overlooked than were corrected. It is possible but not likely that the scribe waited till the manuscript was finished and then looked it all through and made such corrections as had occurred to him while writing. But there do not seem to be a sufficient number of corrections, which require later execution, to warrant such an assumption. In general it is not necessary to assume that the corrections were made later than the time of the first writing. Furthermore Professors Schmidt and Schubart agree that the first writing and the corrections are in the same ink, at least in all passages where the ink is still uninjured. I accept this decision, though I had at first tried to distinguish between first hand corrections like the writing of the text and later corrections in a somewhat smaller and finer hand. The difference is not however greater than is found in different parts of the first writing. Therefore the testimony regarding the ink must be considered final. Also the number of short omissions uncorrected on the last page shows that there was no systematic correction. There are only two corrections that may still be claimed for a later hand. One is on page 53 and seems to be more crude than the first hand. The other, on page 54, is deletion by a small dot below the letter, a system not used by our scribe elsewhere. Professor Schmidt refers these also to the first hand.

8. THE REPETITION OF 15, 4 TO 16, 2

Through carelessness in copying, the scribe repeated on page 22, l. 21 to page 23, l. 19 the text; 15, 4 to 16, 2, which he had just written on p. 21, l. 24 to p. 22, l. 21. The beginning of the repeated passage does not correspond with the beginning of a line in the manuscript, though it seems likely that it did in the parent manuscript, for the repetition starts in the middle of a word. This is an additional proof of what we might assume from the irregularity in lines and columns discussed above on p. 236 f. The scribe is evidently not trying to preserve the lines and pages of the parent manuscript. Yet he may well have approximated the amount of text per page at times, for an estimate of the amount per page shows that it varies from 29 to 42 lines of the Rahlfs' edition in the first 18 pages, which are in double column, and from 30 to 40 in the remaining pages, which are in single column. The larger amounts on the pages in double column are found on the last eight pages of this part, while on the pages with single columns the largest amounts come on the 4th, 5th, and 6th pages before the end. As we have stated above, the scribe evidently crowded at times because he wished to keep within a certain limit. This may well have been due to the limited amount of papyrus that he had. Yet he had a constant reminder, whether he was exceeding or falling short in the amount per page, for after he had averaged 38 Rahlfs' lines per page for the last eight double column pages, he changed to a single column and covered 37 and 35 on the first two pages. This was however more than he wished, so he dropped to 30 and 31 lines on the next two pages, after which he returned to 33 to 34 Rahlfs' lines to the page. This he continues with some variation till near the end, when he again increases for three pages, but only to drop back on the last three. It was not merely the desire to increase the amount of text per page that caused the change from two columns to one, but even more the fact that two columns were awkward to handle and liable to come too near together, when an excessive amount of text was crowded on to a page.

When we consider also that the amount of text on the very first double column pages was 33 to 34 Rahlfs' lines, it seems necessary to conclude that this was approximately the amount of his unit of measure in the parent manuscript. Yet if he was copying page by page, why the difficulty in keeping close to the amount of the original and why are the pages with increased or diminished amounts regularly in groups of two or more? It seems more likely that he was copying from a smaller manuscript and trying to put two or more pages on one or that he was copying from a roll and trying to put two columns in a single one, i.e. four columns on a page. I incline to the former view, since the repetition of 15, 4 to 16, 2 would be made more easily, if a leaf had been accidentally turned, while the scribe was absent. He could then begin at the top of the page where he remembered that he had stopped and would not have to compare the text in order to find the right place to begin, an act that would have at once revealed his error.

The repeated portion covers 33 lines of the Rahlfs' text, so it corresponds fairly closely to an average page, though both times a little less than the neighboring pages. There is a difference of one line in the space taken by the same passage in the two copies, which is best explained by the variation in the closeness of writing, for the second version takes more space, though there are more omissions due to carelessness.

A comparison of the text in the repeated passage will be instructive. It is plain that the scribe is copying the same text each time. As proof compare the following unsupported or practically unsupported readings: 15, 4 εξ σου and εξ ου for εκ σου; transpose *σε κληρονομησει*²; 15, 19 κεναιεους for κεναιους; and 15, 12, επεπιπτεν for επιπιπτει in both copies. Even more remarkable is 16, 1 παιδισκ̄ for παιδισκη in both copies. This is also an excellent confirmation of the assumption made above, that this papyrus reproduces the abbreviation system of the parent manuscript.

There are also differences which must be due to error on the part of the scribe. Thus in his first copy in 15, 16 he has σα[ρ] for γαρ (first letter not preserved in parallel passage) and αμαρτιε for αμαρτιαι; in 15, 19 we seem to read χ[ε]λμοναιους for the correct κελ[μ]οναιους of the second passage; 15, 20 omit by homoioteleuton και τους ραφαιεν και τους αμορραιους. This is a small and doubtful harvest compared with what an examination of the second copy reveals. There one notes: 15, 4 δε for σε (doubtful); 15, 5 αναβλενον for αναβλεφον; 15, 7, τε for δε; ωσται for ωστε; 15, 13-14 omit by homoioteleuton αυτους και ταπεινησουσιν αυτους ετη τετρακοσια το δε εθνος ω εαν δουλευσωσιν; 15, 15 ιρηνης for ειρηνης; 15, 17, διηλθεν for διηλθον; 15, 18, omit by homoioteleuton αιγυπτου εως του ποταμου; 16, 1 repeat δε after γυνη and dittography of αυτω ην. Also in 15, 12 he seems to transpose αυτω ε]πεπ[ιπτε, if we may judge by space. It is evident that there is a great difference in the accuracy of the scribe in copying the two successive passages. If he was not in a normal state, this was the real cause of his repeating the whole passage. Furthermore a survey of the rest of the manuscript shows that the worst errors, which can be definitely assigned to him rather than to his parent manuscript, generally occur in groups. Compare the following passages: 8, 18 to 9, 5; 17, 20 to 27; 18, 11 to 16; 25, 13 to 31; 26, 13 to 20; 29, 33 to 30, 3; 30, 31 to 38; 32, 14 to 25; and the whole of the last page, where haste is evident. At his best he is a fairly faithful but ignorant scribe. There are long stretches of the manuscript which reproduce well the parent.

III. THE CHARACTER OF THE TEXT

I. RELATION TO THE HEBREW

THE most important question in regard to any newly discovered Septuagint manuscript is whether it shows any signs of Hexaplaric influence. In so old a manuscript as Papyrus 911, especially since it seems to have arisen in Coptic circles, we perhaps have a right to assume freedom from indebtedness to Origen but we are not forced to make assumptions, for there is plenty of evidence on which to base a decision.

Hexaplaric signs are preserved by one or more manuscripts in 95 passages on which our Papyrus gives evidence. In 80 cases the Papyrus is directly opposed to the Hexaplaric tradition. Let us consider the remainder: in 4, 25 λεγουσα is read by all other manuscripts, but obelized by Syr-Hex; Papyrus 911 has [ε]ιπεν [δε]. This does not point to an earlier omission but to a translation variant from a Hebrew form in which the verb of saying still existed. It is valuable evidence that the verb of saying was in the original Hebrew.

8, 7, [του ιδειν ει κεκοπακεν το υδωρ] is omitted by 911 k¹ Arm Philo and obelized by Syr-Hex. The Hebrew also omits, so it would seem to be an obvious case of Hebrew influence, if not of Hexaplaric. Yet the phrase appears in identically the same form, except for the article before ιδειν, in the next verse. Such a repetition seems awkward and I am inclined to think it was not original; but if it ever existed in the Hebrew, it was removed by the Massoretic revision. It is easier to assume that 911 has either preserved the original Greek, or has imitated the Hebrew directly, than that this is an isolated instance of the influence of the Hexapla, though the latter explanation must always remain a possibility.

9, 2, omit και επι πασιw τοιw κτηνεσιw της γηw. This is obelized by Syr-Hex and omitted also by Hebrew and manuscripts A a b c d m o p r t w x y c₂ d₂ Arm Boh Sah Eth Palest. The combination of this evidence with 911 points to a source far older than Origen. As της γης immediately precedes this phrase, it is perhaps an omission by homoioteleuton.

32, 29, omit οτι ενισχυσας. This phrase is found only in Sah and obelized in G. It is certainly an error to insert it here, as it is plainly an imitation of the previous verse. If Origen had found it in his Greek manuscripts, he must have obelized it, but the evidence is certain that the original Septuagint did not have it.

34, 15, omit και κατοικησωμεν εν υμιν; obelized by G v and omitted by the Hebrew. The phrase is preceded by υμιν, so the omission could arise from like endings, but it can equally well be an insert in the Greek from verse 16, where it is found both in Hebrew and in Greek (οικησωμεν for κατοικησωμεν). It may be an isolated bit of Hexaplaric influence, but with two other explanations possible, little can be proved by the passage.

34, 16, omit γυναικας; obelized by G and omitted by three other manuscripts, b, 108, and w. These three manuscripts will later be shown to be closely related to 911. Therefore the parent manuscript of all four omitted. This puts the date of the omission too early for it to have come easily through Origen's influence, though it is certainly a case of adaptation to the Hebrew.

34, 30, omit πασαν; obelized by G and omitted by Hebrew; but it is also omitted by all Greek manuscripts and Versions except G a e g j v^{mg} Eth. This points to an error in Origen's Greek manuscripts or in the transmission of the Hexaplaric signs. In the case of the obelized passages there are no sure examples of Hexaplaric influence, though two cases admit of that explanation. On the other hand there is one sure case of accommodation to the Hebrew before the time of Origen and that explanation satisfies equally well the other four cases, one of which is probably too old for Origen and a second is totally unlike the Hexapla. Under these circumstances it seems necessary to admit a limited accommodation to the original Hebrew in the obelized passages.

In passages marked with the asterisk there is similar evidence:

5, 8, * ετη; this is based on Syr-Hex and is probably an error, as all manuscripts have the word in one order or the other.

7, 14, add [*αυτων*³]; this is a possible way of filling the lacuna. The addition is found in manuscripts i^a m r Arm Sah Palest; under an asterisk in Syr-Hex αυτου is found, as also in c. Either form will fill the space here, but related MSS have been followed.

13, 17, add [αυ]της; the addition is supported by all manuscripts except A b h l r w y 108 and Irenaeus, yet Arm places it under an asterisk. Certainly the evidence is too old to be traced to Origen. It is either direct Hebrew influence or, more likely, the original Septuagint, while Origen's manuscripts showed an accidental omission.

16, 4, add αυ[τη]ς = a e j o x Boh Or^{gr}, while in Syr-Hex and Arm it is under an asterisk. Neither e, j nor Boh regularly show Hexaplaric additions nor are they nearly related. Yet a-o-x are claimed by Rahlfs as Hexaplaric manuscripts. It is possible that this is an Hexaplaric addition even in 911, but the form must have been the same, if it were taken directly from the Hebrew, which would therefore be the more natural explanation for the appearance of the word in 911 Boh e j.

25, 33, add αυτου = a b c d l p t w x 107, 108, 381 Arm Boh. Though this is placed under the asterisk by Rahlfs on the evidence of Arm, the manuscripts which have it, except a-t-x, are not Hexaplaric. In fact these are the manuscripts and Versions most closely allied to the text tradition of 911, so we may be sure that αυτου appeared there long before the time of Origen. It is a case of the direct influence of the Hebrew.

27, 31, add αυτο[υ] = A a c o x c₂ and with asterisk in Arm. This looks like an Hexaplaric addition in c-c₂ a-o-x, but 911 and A seem to point to a separate tradition direct from the Hebrew. The nearest relatives of 911 omit the whole phrase; cf. b d e f i^a m n p r w d₂ Eth Lat Chr.

29, 10, add και τα προβατα λαβαν αδελφου της μητρος αυτου = M a c f (j k) o (q s^{mg} u v x Arm (pr. *) Boh Or). As αδελφου της μητρος αυτου precedes, it is more likely that the early Septuagint omitted the phrase by homoioteleuton than that the Hebrew repeated it from the last part of the verse. Therefore 911 and the other non-Hexaplaric manuscripts, as well as Boh, show a survival of the original text.

33, 1, add τοις οφθαλμοις = f. G(sub *) M a c e g j m o s x c₂ Arm Eth add τοις οφθαλμοις αυτου. The omission of αυτου in 911 and f is not accidental, as these manuscripts show relationship elsewhere. This is direct Hebrew influence and not Hexaplaric.

There are thus in this list only four sure cases of adaptation to the Hebrew. Two of these are certainly and one probably due to direct influence; therefore the other one should be explained in the same way, at least in Pap. 911, as all are uses of the personal pronoun, so that there can be no distinction between Hexaplaric and direct Hebrew influence.

There is a good deal of evidence also regarding the Versions of Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion. Yet in only six places is there any resemblance in 911:

6, 2, [υιοι του] θεου for αγγελιοι του θεου. All three Versions had υιοι but only Theodotion had του θεου. The Greek support for αγγελιοι is much weaker than for υιοι, so it does not seem likely that the change originated with the Hexapla or with Theodotion. Here also as in the cases discussed above it was an early adaptation to the Hebrew.

12, 6, τ[ην δρυν την] μαμ[βρη] υψηλην, without other Greek support, though Symmachus is quoted by M s for της δρυος μαμβρη, which appeared also in j v. 911 has a doublet but the genitive case does not appear as in Symmachus, so the addition probably came direct from the Hebrew.

22, 2, [υιον σου τον αγα]πητον σου, without Greek support for the phrase as a whole, though M j s v c₂ cite Symmachus for (υιον σου) τον μονον σου. As the resemblance is in the addition of the second pronoun, it is likely that it came direct from the Hebrew.

26, 31, μετ ειρηνης for μετα σωτηριας. M quotes οι λοιποι for this reading, while s has εν ειρηνη. It is probable, but not sure that 911 derived the change from one of these early translations.

35, 2, καθαρισθετε for καθαρισασθε. Aquila, Symmachus, and the Septuagint are quoted for καθαρισθητε and Theodotion for καθαρισασθε by manuscript v. The support for the latter includes most Greek manuscripts, so there seems an error of statement in v. If the scribe intended to trace καθαρισθητε to Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion, the manuscripts L b q u w c₂ Chr Cyr are indebted to one of these Versions. 911 is perhaps to be classed with the same by considering καθαρισθετε merely an error for καθαρισθητε, but it may also be direct influence of the Hebrew. However as b w and q u often agree with 911 the former view seems the better.

The influence of the Versions on 911 can not be absolutely denied but the direct influence of the Hebrew is more apparent. So the five cases just treated may, with the exception of one, be added to the eleven examples previously enumerated.

To this evidence we may now safely add a little, where no Hexaplaric evidence exists :

6, 21, και for συ δε; 12, 15, [επ]ηρησαν for επηνεσαν; 13, 11, απαι[ρει] for απηρεν; 13, 18, + υψηλην; 14, 14, omit λωτ; 15, 12, επεπιπτεν for επιπιπτει; 19, 2, υψεσθε for υψασθε; 23, 10, omit μεσω; 24, 45, omit ευθυς; 25, 22, και ειπεν for ειπεν δε; 25, 26, ηνικα for οτε; 25, 30, εκαλεσεν for εκληθη; 26, 11, εστιν for εσται; 27, 31, εισηνεγκεν for προσηνεγκεν; 30, 40, κατα μονας for καθ εαυτον; 31, 35, ενεγχε for φερε; 35, 3, (θυσιαστηριον) τον βωμον. See Notes for others.

These seventeen variants are easiest explained as retranslation or adaptation to the Hebrew. In the last case the original Septuagint was also retained, indicating that the borrowings from the Hebrew were inserted between the lines by a reader of the parent manuscript and in this one case both words were copied. The fact that several of these changes show no superior knowledge of Hebrew accords with what might be expected in Greek and Coptic circles. The same kind of comparison of the Septuagint with the Hebrew by pre-Origen readers has been shown for the Freer Papyrus of the Minor Prophets in the first part of this volume, pp. 25 ff., but it is less extensive in 911.

The Papyrus of the Minor Prophets also shows certain special agreements with the Vulgate (see p. 43), which may well indicate variants in the Hebrew text used by Hieronymus. In this respect also 911 shows similarity. A few of the instances are: 5, 12, (εζησεν) add και = Vulg. vixit quoque; 24, 65, transpose εκεινος ανθρωπος = Vulgate; 30, 6, και for δια τουτο, compare Vulgate, et idcirco. In the last two lists I have confined my discussion to passages which have no other Greek support. If variants supported only by the few manuscript closely allied to the text tradition of 911 had been included, more instances of accommodation to the Hebrew could have been shown, but enough has been given to establish the fact and the other passages are best treated under the section dealing with manuscript groups related to 911.

2. THE COMPARISON OF 911 WITH OTHER MANUSCRIPTS

In Genesis the uncial manuscripts are too fragmentary for us to learn much from a special comparison of them with 911, so these older and supposedly better manuscripts will be taken up along with the minuscules given by Brooke and McLean. In the first list are tabulated all instances where there is considerable support for both sides. About 500 readings are included. These variants together with their manuscript support will be given in full in the notes following the text of 911 and so are omitted here. The number of agreements of the different manuscripts with 911 are as follows:

b	182	g	109	e	73
w	177	c ₂	108	d ₂	69
p	168	t	103	j	69
d	160	c	102	k	67
r	154	s	101	y	63
m	149	n	100
i	149	v	95
a	148	q	90
x	136	l	88
o	133	u	77
f	131	h	75

The first eleven of these seem likely to show fairly close relationship to our papyrus. The figures for k and d₂ are misleading as these manuscripts are very fragmentary; also i, u, v, and x are somewhat fragmentary.

If the uncial manuscripts are compared with this list, E will be found at the head with 69 agreements, then D, 58; M, 57; A, 40. Of these M and A are nearly complete for the portion covered by 911 and comparatively complete reports on D exist, but there are large lacunae in E. The other uncials are only fragments and admit of no comparison. It is apparent that E alone can be considered as showing particular affiliation with this old text tradition and that it is less nearly related than many of the minuscules.

A hasty examination of the other minuscules listed by Holmes and Parsons shows that Brooke and McLean chose wisely in the main. Only 108 (= Complutensian) with 58¹ agreements and 107 with 39 are to be compared. There are no others that approach the numbers even of the uncials. Manuscript 381, which I collated last year at the Escorial, is somewhat better. Though fragmentary and in places illegible 31 agreements were noted, some of which are noteworthy.

Much more interesting is the agreement with the early translations of the Septuagint, though there are many of our list of variants, on which they can give no evidence. Of these the Armenian ranks highest with 102 agreements, then Bohairic, 84; Ethiopic, 84; Sahidic, 68; and Old Latin, 47. The evidence in the case of the last is incomplete.

As many of these 500 readings are correct and are supported by the great majority of the manuscripts under consideration, it will be well to compare a smaller list, in which 911 is supported by at most two or three other manuscripts or families of manuscripts. This list contains nearly 300 readings and the table of agreements is as follows:

b	78	c ₂	36	y	17
w	75	t	35	D	17
r	67	s	35	h	15
f	64	E	33	L	14
d	62	l	31	G	13
p	62	q	28	e	12
i	62	u	28	M	12
m	58	g	27	j	11
a	45	c	25	MS 318	11
n	45	v	24
o	45	k	22
x	42	A	21
MS 108	40	d ₂	17

I have introduced here manuscript 108 from the Holmes and Parsons collation supplemented in some passages by the Complutensian edition, which was derived from it. I have also added the fragmentary manuscripts L, G, and 318. The excellence and age of this shorter list of readings is shown by the agreements with the early authors citing the Septuagint: Chrysostom, 35; Philo, 36; Cyril of Alexandria, 23; Theodoretus, 9; Origen, 4. Also in this list of less well supported readings the early translations rank relatively higher. Armenian agrees 63 times, Ethiopic 49, Bohairic 34, Sahidic 35, and Latin 35.

A survey of this shorter list also suggests certain families of manuscripts that are closely related to 911. Nearest of all is family b-w-108,¹ for b and w head both lists in the number of agreements. In the following readings this family is the only Greek support for 911:

- 3, 20, + [ην] before μητηρ = b
 14, 10, transpose εφυγον εις την ορ[ινην] = b w 108 Arm Boh
 14, 14, [- οπισω αυτων] = b w 108
 18, 11, - πρεσβυτεροι = b w 108 Chr
 31, εαν ευρω εκει εικ[οσι] = b w
 24, 59, [+ την] (before ρεβεκκαν) = b w
 24, 65, [- εστιν] = b w Phil
 25, 2, [ελαβε δε και ετεκεν] = b
 26, 31, - αυτου¹ = b w Arm Georg, compare H. & P
 27, 28, - και³ = b w 108 Lat Philo Cyr Iren Cyp Hil Vulg
 36, [- τουτο] = b w Philo Vulg
 41, - αυτον = b Eth (added above in 911)
 28, 2, - του (πατρος) = b w 108
 29, 1, εκ (for υιον) = b w (108) Comp and perhaps a few others
 3, + παλιw = b w 108 Lat; compare H. & P
 31, 9, οφειλιw (error for αφειλεw) = b w 108 Cyr $\frac{1}{3}$
 32, 11, transpose αυτον εγ[ω] = b w 108
 16, και ειπεν = b (108) Comp Lat Arm Georg
 34, 2, - ο (υιος) = b Cyr
 8, - οwν = b w 108 Sah Eth Chr Bar-Hebr
 16, - γυναικας = b w 108 (cf. G ÷)

These twenty special readings show both the closeness of the relationship and the type of text of the common parent. Most of these variants are probably old errors, especially the ten short omissions and the two transpositions. The numerous agreements with 911 do not exhaust the noteworthy old readings of this family, for it is often found in agreement with the older uncials, when 911 is opposed. It was either derived from an earlier ancestor of 911 or it was early contaminated with another old text.

Family f-i-r probably claims second place, though all three show considerable signs of correction away from the original type of the family. Manuscript i however has repeatedly been corrected back to the family type by a second hand. This looks like the work of a dior-thotes restoring the original readings of the parent manuscript, where the scribe had forgotten his instructions to ignore corrections. In the following readings f-i-r is the only Greek support for 911 :

Some ancestor of this family was even more nearly related to 911 than the b-w family, but it has suffered more correction. Nevertheless it contains many good old readings and one does not feel that even these special agreements are necessarily errors.

In the total number of agreements with 911 family d-p-107 ranks ahead of f-i-r and only slightly below it in the list of special readings. Holmes and Parsons' collation of 107 is particularly imperfect, so it gives almost no assistance on the special readings, where 911 and this family stand alone; they are as follows:

- 6, 1, [εν τη γη] for επι της γης = d p 107
 12, 14, [ηλθεν] (for εισηλθεν) = d p 107
 17, 7, - ανα μεσον² = d Lat Or^{lat} (cf. b q u Chr)
 8, - μετα σε to μετα σε = p
 25, 11, + [τον] before [α]βρααμ = p
 30, 10, - ιακωβ¹ = p
 31, 8, - προβατα to προβατα = d p
 43, μου (for σου²) = p Cyr (cf. d n - υιοι σου)
 48-49, - εμου και σου to εμου και σου = p
 32, 20, - αυτου¹ to αυτου³ = d p 107

All of these special agreements seem to be errors, which were unknown to the two families just discussed. The four omissions by homoioteleuton are remarkable and the number prevents us from thinking them chance agreements. d-p-107 was derived from a near ancestor of 911 and that ancestor had an undue number of omissions by homoioteleuton. Errors of this kind in 911 must not always be assigned to the scribe even when unsupported, but rather to the scribe of the parent, except when association with other errors shows that our scribe was not at his best. Both d and p have suffered correction and, if Rahlfs is right that there is some relation to the Lucianic text,¹ that must have come into the common parent of all three, d, p, and 107. Yet any such correction must have been very incomplete, for much that was pre-Lucianic has survived. Accordingly I should be more inclined to believe that Lucian was indebted to some ancestor of this group, even while admitting that the group has suffered somewhat from correction.

The closeness with which these three families are united with 911 and with each other is shown by readings where they stand opposed to all other Greek manuscripts or to almost all. We may compare the following readings of 911 with the additional support:

- 4, 16, [και εξηλθ[εν]] = b-w-108 d-p-107 g s v Thdt

with these groups four times, D twice, and A, M, and G once each. The minuscules are found more often: m nine times, s and ζ_{18} five times, g, k, n, and v four each, o, t, x, y, and d_2 three each, and a, l, q-u, and c_2 twice each. Three times several of Rahlfs' Hexaplaric group (G a c k m o t x c_2) are found in support of these older groups and for 16 out of the 34 readings at least one of the Hexaplaric manuscripts is found in the support. This seems to point to a definite relationship. Let us compare the other passages where members of the Hexaplaric group join with η_{11} , either with or without its regular allies:

It seems clear that in these and similar, better supported readings there are traces of pre-Origen manuscripts, in some cases even of the ones that Origen used. The persistence of the older text varies in the different manuscripts, being clearly most pronounced in m, yet the examples cited are enough to prove that agreement with Hexaplaric manuscripts does not necessarily show the late origin of a reading.

Another family which sometimes shows relationship with 911 is q-u, though most of the old readings have been removed by correction. A few examples of the old base follow :

- 6, 14 $\epsilon\alpha\upsilon\tau\omega$ (for $\sigma\epsilon\alpha\upsilon\tau\omega$) = 911 q-u
 7, 8, + [$\pi\alpha\upsilon\tau\omega\nu$] before [$\tau\omega\nu$ $\pi\epsilon$] $\tau\epsilon\iota\nu\omega\nu$ = q-u Syr-Hex
 30, 37, - $\delta\epsilon$ ² = 911 q-u Eth (cf. L Lat)
 32, 28, - $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omega$ = 911 q-u t Sah (j*)
 34, 17, $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\tau\epsilon\mu\epsilon\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$ = 911 q-u 318 (G)
 26, $\tau\omicron$ for $\tau\omicron\nu$ ¹ = q-u
 30, + $\pi\rho\omicron\varsigma$ before $\sigma\upsilon\mu\epsilon\omega\nu$ = q-u Vulg Cyr

More often other groups combine as can be seen in a few of the examples previously cited and in others in the notes following the text of 911.

It is hardly necessary to discuss the individual manuscripts, which at times agree with 911 in rare readings. Doubtless sometimes these agreements are due to chance, but more often they must be traced back to the early base. They all help to illustrate the frequent and thorough character of the correction, to which most of the Septuagint manuscripts have been subjected.

3. CONCLUSION

In the main the results of this study are the same as in that of the Papyrus of the Minor Prophets. The uncials can not be grouped and they show less of the old, uncorrected base than do several of the groups of minuscules. Yet though much corrected the old base at times survives and the uncials E and D, and even A and M must be given due consideration in reëstablishing the text of Genesis.

The groups b-w-108, f-i-r, and d-p have preserved relatively the largest amount of the pre-Hexaplaric text. These with 911 show clearly that there had already been considerable accommodation to the Hebrew. Origen did not start this form of corruption in the text, though he doubtless increased it. Even accepted Hexaplaric manuscripts show much of the old base, for Origen used it as the foundation of his Septuagint column.

Readings from this old base find frequent support in the translations of the Septuagint. Armenian, Bohairic, and Ethiopic are the closest relatives, though in the rarer readings Sahidic and Old Latin rank nearly as high.

Among the writers quoting the Septuagint Chrysostom, Philo, and Cyril of Alexandria are in agreement much the most often. However we must note that the standing of Chrysostom is to a great extent due to the exceptional number of his citations of Genesis. In a selected set of citations gathered by E. Hautsch (Mitth. des Septuaginta-Unternehmens, Heft 1) to show that family b-w-108 was not Lucianic we find that where Chrysostom differs from the common Septuagint text he is supported by 911 only four times, in three of which b-w also agree. In the 29 other readings 911, b-w-108 are united against Chrysostom. It is clear from this that he used generally a corrected later text, doubtless Lucianic, but in it some of the old base survived.

The unsupported readings of 911 have been referred to under the different topics: scribal errors, cursive parent, abbreviations, grammatical peculiarities, and influence of the Hebrew text; they will not be enumerated here, but all can be found in the Notes.

IV. THE REPRINT OF THE TEXT

In the reprint of the text of the Genesis Papyrus, which follows, the pages, columns, and lines of the original are reproduced. For convenience of reference chapter and section numbers are added in the left-hand margin. In the right-hand margin the lines of the page or column are given, in order to assist in comparing with the Facsimile, which appears at the same time as this volume.

We have tried to reproduce the text of the first hand as originally written; yet obvious errors immediately corrected are shown in the footnotes, as well as all corrections by whatever hand, which seem to have been made after the first draft of the copy was completed. In this inconsistencies have doubtless occurred, for it is most difficult to distinguish between an immediate and a later correction.

All abbreviations are reproduced as in the original. Apostrophes, paragraph marks, and dots or strokes above letters are given as in the manuscript.

Fragmentary and dim letters are printed without distinguishing mark provided a characteristic part of the letter was visible. In case the part of the letter visible might belong to different letters equally well, the letter called for by the text is printed with a dot under it.

Longer lacunae are omitted, but the number of lines lost is indicated. Shorter lacunae are supplied usually from the Brooke and McLean text, but within square brackets, in case the space agrees approximately, or even if no variant could be found to fill the space passably. In a few cases the number of letters required to fill the lacuna are indicated by dots. Spellings and forms characteristic of the MS are restored in the lacunae. Readings at variance with the Brooke and McLean text have been inserted in some lacunae, either for the sake of consistency, or to agree with the MSS, which generally support the papyrus.

Capitals, accents, breathings, etc. are omitted in these supplied portions as in the preserved text. Also the characteristic abbreviations are used, so as to make the real length of the lacunae more easily apparent.

References in the footnotes are to pages and lines of the MS as given on the right hand margin.

NOTES

In the following notes all special and weakly supported readings of 911 are treated except obvious itacisms. In the case of the errors listed the cause, even if obvious, is in general suggested. Better supported readings are given with the authorities for each in order to illustrate the varied relationships of 911. In the case of readings of 911 which are supported by the great majority of authorities no mention has seemed necessary, unless they are opposed to the Brooke and McLean text. Such cases I have tried to list in full, even where they are supplied in lacunae. The more doubtful restorations of text in the lacunae are either discussed or enumerated as doubtful.

The text authorities have been drawn in the main from the Brooke and McLean edition. I have added important variants from my own collations of MSS 318 and 381, and all the variants of MSS 107 and 108 cited in the Holmes and Parsons edition. Rarely other MSS are cited from that edition, but usually an added "etc." indicates that other authorities are there cited or implied.

No readings have been drawn from the Rahlfs' edition because of the system of citation used in it.

The new edition of the Vulgate by Dom Quentin has been cited, when found in support of rare readings.

"No support," means not found in MSS for that passage.

A parchment fragment, Mich. Pap. 2724, has been cited for one rare reading. The full text of it is found on page 430, following the Notes.

- I, 19 (2 a, 14) About ten letters are needed to fill the line and no variant reported from other MSS; a dittography of two words would fill the space.
- 22 (2 a, 27) ευλογησεν: the temporal augument is generally omitted with this diphthong in 911.
- II, 7 (3 b, 10) ζωσαν corr ζωσαν: the scribe probably started to write ζωης but saw his error at once.
- 12 (3 b, 27) [ε|κει|θ|εν] is practically certain though it has no other MS support; cf. verse 10.

- 13 (3 b, 29) [γ]ιῶ̄ is an itacistic error for γηων but finds support in γειων of 19 Arm² Arab and some Vulg mss.
 13 (3 b, 30) [κν]κλο for κυκλων has no support; see Intro. for interchanges of ο and ω and the frequent omission of the abbreviation stroke.

The omission of την has no support but compare omitted γην in 344^{ms}.

- 17 (4 a, 13) φαγητ[ε]: η is clearly read and a bit of the top stroke of τ can be seen; φαγησθε thus seems impossible. Both have good MS support.
 19 (4 a, 24) τ[ο ονομα]: the article must be read here because of the remnant of τ, though only 56^{ms} 129 Chr $\frac{1}{3}$ support.
 20 (4 a, 25) εκαλισε for εκαλεσεν has no support and is an odd vowel interchange for this Papyrus. The correction α over ε² came from an abbreviation stroke.

The omission of πασιν τοις κτηνεσιν και πασι τοις πετεινοις του ουρανου και is due to homoioteleuton and has no support; the omission of the first phrase by 426 and of the second by Sah arose from the same cause.

- 20 (4 a, 26) του αγρου = A E M and a few minuscules, including however 75 120 121 129 and 426.
 20 (4 a, 27) ουκ ευρεθη: ουκ has no support except ουκ ην of Eus.
 22 (4 a, 33) κν̄ for κς̄; abbreviation by suspension, see Intro.
 24 (4 b, 5) In the first lacuna 15 letters have been supplied though the space is right for 12. Either there was some abbreviation or αυτου was omitted as in Phil Evang $\frac{1}{2}$ Paul Theoph Or-gr Or-lat $\frac{1}{2}$ A-Z.
 24 (4 b, 6) πο[ς την] γυναι[κα] = all MSS except A 121 344^{ms}; πος arose from an overlooked abbreviation stroke of the parent MS, πος.

- III, 2 (4 b, 18) [καρ]που του for παντος = D E (-του) 54 55 75 120 121 129* 426 Arm Boh Eth Palest.
 2 (4 b, 19) [του εν τω παραδ]εισω = 44 53 56 59 72 106 129 344^{ms} Eth Pal Luc.

- 6 (5 a, 4) $\kappa\alpha\beta$ for $\kappa\alpha\iota \tau\omega$: no support; β arose from ι joined either with a line filler or with a cursive abbreviation for $\tau\omega$; $\kappa\alpha\iota$ is omitted by a few MSS and Versions, but not $\tau\omega$.
- 6 (5 a, 5) $\epsilon\phi[\alpha\gamma]\rho\sigma\alpha\nu$ for $\epsilon\phi\alpha\gamma\omicron\nu$ of most MSS; no support here, though a common form in the Septuagint.
- 8 (5 a, 10) $[\tau\eta\varsigma] \phi\omega[\nu\eta\varsigma]$: thus supplied with E and most minuscules against A L M and few, of which only 53* and 120 show any affiliation with 911.
- 9 (5 a, 16) om $[\alpha\delta\alpha\mu^2]$: space is lacking and the omission is supported by L 15 19 44 54 55* 61 82 106 120 129 134 135 314 344^{txt} Arm Eth Pal Phil Theoph $\frac{1}{2}$ Ir.
- 10 (5 a, 17) $[\tau\eta\varsigma \phi\omega\nu\eta\varsigma]$ is supplied with all MSS except A E M 55* 120 129 134 407 Theoph. There is no room in the lacuna for $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\pi\alpha\tau\omicron\nu\nu\tau\omicron\varsigma$, omitted only by 75 Arm; cf. Luc.
- 10-11 (5 a, 19) Omit by homoioteleuton $\gamma\upsilon\mu\nu\omicron\varsigma$ to $\gamma\upsilon\mu\nu\omicron\varsigma$; no support.
- 11 (5 a, 21) $[\mu\eta \phi\alpha]\gamma\epsilon$: no support; the change from infinitive to imperative was an intentional change to direct statement; but corrected at once.
- 12 (5 a, 21) $[\alpha\delta\alpha\mu]$: article omitted with E L 15 19 44 53 56 61 72 82 106 129 135 314 426 Theoph.
- 13 (5 a, 24) $\kappa\upsilon\rho\iota\omicron\varsigma$ is omitted in the lacuna to agree with the related MSS, L 15 19 44 54 56 61 82 106 121 129 314 426 Boh Pal Phil Theoph Chr Luc.
- 14 (5 a, 27) $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ for $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$: abbreviation by suspension; corrected by same hand. This line seems too long; perhaps the article or conjunction was omitted in the lacuna or abbreviation was used; it does not seem necessary to omit $\tau\omega \omicron\phi\epsilon\iota$ with L.
- 14 (5 b, 1) In the attempt to fill the lacuna $[\tau\omega\nu \epsilon\pi\iota]$ is added before $[\tau\eta\varsigma \gamma\eta\varsigma]$ with A^{ms} E M 19 52 55 56^a 57 59 82 120 121 129 130 314 344 407 Boh Theoph.
- 14 (5 b, 2) There does not seem space in the lacuna for $\sigma\omicron\nu$, omitted by all MSS except A E L M 55 56^a 72 75 120 129 134 314* 407 Boh Eth Cyp.
- $[\pi\omicron\rho\epsilon]\upsilon\sigma\iota$: itacistic error without support.

- 20 (6 a, 2) [ην] is added before [μητηρ] with 19, the nearest related MS; the line is still shorter than the first.
- 20 (6 a, 3) ζω[ντ]ω[ν] τω[ν]: dittography.
- 22 (6 a, 6) om κυριος = all MSS except A E 52 53 57 130 134 135 344 426 Arm Boh. (M^{ms} adds under an asterisk.)
- 22 (6 a, 10) ετ[λαβη] corr εκ[λαβη] for λαβη is hardly a satisfactory restoration as it must be explained as sound repetition from εκτεινη. Schmidt sees ετ deleted by the first hand. Also with this reading the space requires απο, found in all MSS except A E M 55 59 75 129, which omit, while 72 has εκ.
- 24 (6 a, 17-18) [τα χειρου]βεῖ [εταξεν]: the transposition is unsupported, but necessary from space; the abbreviation stroke can be read μ in this Papyrus and furnishes an explanation for the error of A Sah Vulg. The transposition in the following line, [την ρομφαιαν] την [φλογυνην] is also unsupported. An alternative restoration would avoid transpositions by omitting της τρυφης in l. 17 but it leaves l. 19 very short.
- IV, 2 (6 a, 25) προσεθη[κεν]: against 19 44 53 54 55^b 56 59 61 72 82 106 134 314 426 Phil Chr Cyr (Theoph).
- 6 (6 b, 4) $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$: the correction of $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ followed by its deletion with the addition of the correct $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$ shows that the scribe knew the faultiness of the first form of the abbreviation. His frequent use of it therefore indicates that it was in the parent MS.
- 6 (6 b, 5) [συνε] $\overline{\pi\epsilon\sigma\epsilon\nu}$ is deleted by the strokes above and below; the scribe's eye had dropped from να τι¹ to να τι², but he discovered his error before starting the next line.
- 7 (6 b, 8) The line seems four letters too long, but I have not ventured to omit ουκ with 135 Boh or write αν with the later MSS.
- 10 (6 b, 23) [α]ιματων: all other MSS have the singular.
- 11 (6 b, 26) απο: so all MSS except A 56 121 Arm Phil Chr Cyr, επι, and 53 εκ.
- 13 (7 a, 1) [το]ν $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ = A alone.

- 14 (7 a, 2) εκ[βαλλεις] has been restored after E M and the usual support of 911 except 19, 56, and 106.
- 14 (7 a, 6) [εσται] is required by the space and supported by all mss except A* Eth Cyr $\frac{1}{5}$.
- 16 (7 a, 13) [και εξηλ]θ[εν] = 16 18 19 44 54 106 107 108 130 314 344 Thdt Comp; line 13 is still two or three letters short but that amount of variation is frequent. Line 14 is still too long and is saved only by the transposition εν γη ναιδ ωκησεν], which has no support.
- 17 (7 a, 19) [ε]πονομα[σεν]: see Intro. for interchange of ο and ω.
- 18 (7 a, 21) [ε]γεννηθ[η]: so most mss except A M 15 55 57* 75 106 129* 135 314* 376 Theoph Chr Cyr.
- 18 (7 a, 23) μαιηλ² = A 19 55* 57 75 121* 134 135 314 Arm.
- 21 (7 b, 5) Space requires the addition of [πατηρ] after ην; it is supported by 376 (ο πατηρ) 426 Arm Eth Syr Phil.
- 22 (7 b, 7) The long omission supplied between the lines and in the margin was due to homoioteleuton and was corrected by the scribe himself. If the mark before ειπεν shows the place to insert the correction, it is one word too late.
- 24 (7 b, 15) The lacuna seems to call for ten more letters and no variant is reported from other mss. A dittography of [εκ δε λαμεχ] would fill the line.
- 25 (7 b, 17) συν[λαβουσα]: non-assimilation is common in 911, see Intro.
- 25 (7 b, 18) επονω[μασεν]: perhaps an error by metathesis, but see Intro. for interchanges of ο and ω.
- 25 (7 b, 19) [ε]ιπεν [δε]: no support. The regular reading λεγουσα is obelized by Syr-Hex, placed under an asterisk by Arm, and omitted by Phil Clem. Both considerations of space and the remnants of letters preserved forbid the alternative και ειπεν in 911.
- 25 (7 b, 20) There is no space for γαρ, which is omitted by 54 72 75 Boh Eth Phil $\frac{1}{2}$ also.
- V, 1 (7 b, 27) καθ: there is no other support for the false aspiration, but compare Thackeray, 8, 5.

- 2 (7 b, 30) The omission of [και επωνομασεν το ονομα αυτων αδαμ η ημερα εποησεν αυτους] is due to homoioteleuton and without support, but compare 52 72 314.
- 3 (8 a, 1) [ετη διακοσια τριακοντα] = 15 19 44 53 54 55² 56 61 72 82 106 129 314 426 Arm Boh Eth Chr. This order of year and numeral is preserved throughout the chapter by 911 and its regular minuscule supporters.
- 4 (8 a, 5) αδα[μ as εζησεν]: the addition is required by space and supported by all mss except A D E M 52 55 56^a 57 120 121 129 407 Arm Boh Syr Vulg.
- 4 (8 a, 6) γεννησεν for γεννησαι is an unusual error; it may have come from the correction of an itacastic error being read as an abbreviation mark.
- 4 (8 a, 7) ετη επτακοσια = all mss except A D E M 52 55 57 59 120 121 130 134 344 376 407 Syr.
- 4 (8 a, 8) θυγατερες: common error for accusative; see Intro.
- 5 (8 a, 9) [ετη εννα]κοσια [τριακοντα] = 15 19 44 55 56 61 72 82 106 108 129 314 426 Arm Boh Eth Chr.
- 6 (8 a, 11) [ετη διακοσια πεντε]: thus supplied to conform with regular system and with related mss.
- 7 (8 a, 14) ετη [επτακοσια επτα] = 15 19 44 53 54 61 72 82 106 108 129 134 314 426 etc.
- 8 (8 a, 17) [ετη] εννακο[σια δεκα δυο] = 15 (19) 44 53 56 61 72 75 82 108 130 314 344 Arm Boh (Eth) etc.
- 9 (8 a, 18) [ετη εκατον ενε]νηκο[ντα] = D M and all related minuscules.
- 10 (8 a, 21) [ετη επτα]κοσια δεκα πεν[τε] = 15 19 44 52 54 56 72 75 82 106 108 129 314 344 407 etc.
- 11 (8 a, 25) [ετη εννα]κοσια πεντε = 15 19 44 52 54 56 57 61 72 82 106 108 129 314 etc.
- 12 (8 a, 26) και καιν[αν]: dittography; no support, but cf. Vulg, vixit quoque.
- 12 (8 a, 27) [ετη εκατον] εβδ[ομηκοντ]α = 15 19 54 56 61 72 82 108 129 134 314 426 etc.; cf. 44 53 106.
- 13 (8 a, 30) [ετη επτακοσια τεσσερακοντα]: supplied to conform with system and related minuscules.

- 15 (8 b, 2) [ετη εκατον εξηκ]οντα πε[ντε] = 15 19 44 54 56
61 72 82 106 108 129 134 314 376 426 etc.
- 16 (8 b, 6) [ετη επτακοσια τριακον]τα = 15 19 44 53 54 56^b 61 72 75 82 106 108 129 314 344 etc.
- 16 (8 b, 7) θυ[γατερες]: the scribe considered this the accusative form and it is supplied in all the lacunae of this chapter.
- 19 (8 b, 16) [ετη οκτακοσια]: this order is used to conform with the system and related minuscules.
- 20 (8 b, 19) ετη [εννακοσια εξηκον]τα δυο = 15 19 44 53 56 59 61 72 82 106 108 129 134 314 426 Compl etc.
- 21 (8 b, 21) [ετη εκατον εξη]κοντα πεντε = 15 19 44 56 59
72 82 106 108 129 314 426 etc.
- 22 (8 b, 25) [ετη δ]ιακοσια = 15 19 44 53 54 56 72 82 106 108 129 314 344 426 Arm Boh Sah Eth etc.
- 25 (9 a, 3) [ετη εκατον εξ]ηκοντα επ[τα] = 19 53 54 56 72

- 26 (9 a, 7) [ετη οκτακο]σια δυο = 19 44 53 54 56 72 82 106
108 129 134 314 426 etc.
- 27 (9 a, 11) ε[τη εννακοσια εξηκοντα] ενν[εα] = 15 19 44 53
54 56 72 106 108 129 314 426 etc.
- 28 (9 a, 13) [ετη εκατον ογδοηκον]τα οκ[τω] = 15 19 44 53
54 56 72 82 106 108 129 314 426 etc.
- 29 (9 a, 20) $\overline{\kappa\nu}$ for $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$: abbreviation by suspension.
- 30 (9 a, 22) [ετη] πεντακοσια εξ[ηκοντα πεντε] = 15 19 44
53 54 56 72 82 106 108 129 314 426 etc.
- 31 (9 a, 25) (λαμεχ) + αζ εσησεν: metathesis for ας εξησεν = 426; cf. verse 27.
- 31 (9 a, 25) ετη ογ[δακοσια πεντη]κοντα τρια: no support for ογδακοσια = οκτακοσια; for the form compare ογδοηκοντα and its derivatives.
- VI, 1 (9 b, 4) [εν τη γη] is supplied instead of επι της γης, though supported only by 44 106 107; even with this text one extra letter has been crowded into the lacuna.
[θυγ]ατε[ρες]: see above and in following verse.
- 1 (9 b, 5) [εγεννηθησα]ν: restored to agree with all mss except A M 15 56*.
- 2 (9 b, 6) [υιοι] fits the space much better than αγγελοι;

- it is supported by most MSS, Versions, and Fathers, including M 19 44 53 56^a 82 106 120 129 314 344 407 426.
- 3 (9 b, 14) [ετη εκατον εικοσι]: this form is restored in order to conform with the system and with related mss.
- 5 (9 b, 26) πονηρα + [εκ νεο]τητος αυτου = Sah (a pueritia eius); cf. εκ νεοτητος, 37 Eth and 426 Chr $\frac{2}{3}$ (om πασας τας ημερας).
- 7 (10 a, 1) τον: dittography of article at bottom of previous page.
- 7 (10 a, 3) ἰ[χθυος] for κτηνους: no support, but it is an intelligible exaggeration of the text.
- 7 (10 a, 4) πετεινων: the article is omitted by E 15 19 44 52 53 56^a 72 75 82 106 129 314 426 etc.
- 9 (10 a, 9) [γενεα]: only A reads γενεσει.
- 11 (10 a, 13) [εραν]τι = 15 37 44 59 61 64 106 107 426.
- 11 (10 a, 14) [αδικια]ς + απ α[ντων] = 53 Sah; compare verse 13.
- 13 (10 a, 18) τω ν[ωε] = 44 106 121 and probably 107 and some others from Holmes and Parsons.
- 13 (10 a, 19) [εμου]: restored with M 15 19 44 52 54 55 56 57 58 59 61 72 106 120 130 135 314 344 407 etc.
- 13 (10 a, 21) ννν ἴδου: all others omit ννν.
- 14 (10 a, 23) εαυτω = 120 407; for form see Mayser, Gram. 303 f.
- 14 (10 a, 25) [την] κειβωτ[ο]ν: against επ αυτης of 19 44 59 61 82 106 107 108 314.
- 16 (10 b, 3) om της κιβωτου = 15 19 44 58* 61 82 106 108 314 426 Eth Pales Chr; M^{mss} prefixes asterisk.
- 16 (10 b, 4) διωρυφα for διωροφα = D E; an unusual change of vowels.
- 17 (10 b, 8) There is no space for εν αυτη of A and the remnants of a letter before πνευ[μα] seem ν rather than η.
- 20 (10 b, 24) om και απο παντων των κτηνων κατα γενος = 18 72 407 Sah Pales Old-Lat^{Sabat} Tert; obelized in Syr-Hex but it seems clearly an omission by homoio-teleuton.
- 20 (10 b, 25) ερποτων: the abbreviation stroke for ν in parent MS was overlooked.

- 21 (II a, 3) και for συ δε: a natural translation interchange but without support, though δε is omitted by Boh.
- 21 (II a, 7) [φα]γει for φαγειν: the abbreviation stroke was again overlooked.
- 22 (II a, 8) Omit [κυριος] with E 15 19 44 53 54 56 57 58 59 61 72 75 106 108 314 344 426 Pales etc. It would require excessive crowding to insert it in the lacuna.
- VII, 2 (II a, 16) [οντων καθαρων]: space requires the addition of οντων, supported by E M 53 55 56 57 72 75 120 121 129 130 344 407 Arm Syr.
- 3 (II a, 20) [παντων των πετεινων] = all except A 52 57 58 121. The lacuna is still hardly filled but that can be explained by the three omegas, often written very broadly.
- 3 (II a, 21) [πετεινων] του ο[υ]ραν[ου] = D 15 19 44 52 53 54 56^b 57 58 59 82 106 129 130 134 314 344 426 Eth etc.
- 4 (II a, 27) πασαυ [την εξαναστησιν ην] = all except A M 53 56^a 57 75 121 129; D E 55 56* read αναστησιν.
- 5 (II a, 30) κ̄υ: abbreviation by suspension.
- 6 (II a, 32) εγενετο υδατος for του υδατος εγενετο of most MSS; cf. εγενετο του υδατος of 129 134 135 (Palest).
- 7 (II a, 35) om μετ αυτου = 18 52 79 Chr Catena Nic.
- 8 (II b, 2) + [παντων] before [των πετεινων]¹ = 120 407 Syr-Hex (15 52 55 57 M (sub -) 54 56^a and many, which add more).
- 8 (II b, 4) The addition of [παντων] before *των κτηνων*² is somewhat doubtful; sixteen letters are needed to fill the lacuna; with the addition there are eighteen, without it twelve. παντων is added by E 15 52 57 59; none of these except E is closely related to 911.
- 8 (II b, 5) Omit [και απο των πετεινων]² = M 15 19 52 54 55 56^a 57 58 61 72 120 129 130 314 344 407 426 Arm Boh Sah Eth Chr. Under an asterisk in Syr-Hex and obelized by Arm according to Field. The latter is an error.
- 8 (II b, 6) [ερπετων των] + [ερποντων] = E 15 19 44 53 54 55^b 57 58 59 61 72 82 106 107 129* 130 314 344 426 Arm Sah Pales etc.

- 9 (II b, 7) [εισηλ]θον: against its usual allies, D E 19 54 56 61 108 129 314.
- 11 (II b, 15) ταυτα: no support; vowel change due to influence of ημερα.
- 11 (II b, 16) [πασαι] is omitted with E 18 52* 56* 58 Sah Pales Cat. Nic. Even with this omission the line has two extra letters.
- 14 (II b, 24) (θηρια) + της [γης] = 15 19 44 52 54 55 57 59 61 72 106 108 130 134 314 344 376 426 Georg Cat. Nic. etc.
- 14 (II b, 25) om [και παντα τα κτηνη κατα γενος] = 59 61; omission by homoioteleuton.
- 14 (II b, 27) (κατα γενος)³ + [αυτων] = 56^a 71 72 129 Arm Sah Pales; + αυτου, 376 Syr-Hex sub*.
+ [ορνεο]ν before πετεινον = 53 55 56^a 58 129 130 135 344 426 Arm Boh Sah Pales. Both of these additions are needed to fill the lacuna.
- 15 (II b, 29) om [αρσεν και θηλυ] with all MSS except A 121.
- 16 (II b, 33) $\overline{\kappa\nu}$: abbreviation by suspension.
- 16 (II b, 34) Transpose [εξωθεν αυ]του την κει[βωτο]ν = all MSS except A 121 Boh Eth Pales.
- 17 (II b, 35) om επι της γης¹ = all except A 55 56^a 129 134 Boh Sah Eth Pal.
- 17 (12 a, 1) [ε]πληθυνεν for επληθυνθη: no support; it is an intransitive use of the verb, which occurs in late Greek. It seems strange here, so that one might surmise that επληθυνετο was first written in imitation of the form in verse 18. As το υδωρ follows it would be easy for το to drop out.
- 20 (12 a, 12) τα υψη[λα] = E M 52 54 56 57 72 82 121 129 134 135 376 against the usual relatives of 911.
- 22 (12 a, 19) ξηρα: σ omitted because expressed by abbreviation stroke in parent MS.
- 23 (12 a, 20) (εξηλειψεν) + ο $\overline{\theta\varsigma}$ = 53 56^a 129 (Sah) Vulg^{MSS}.
- 23 (12 a, 23) τω for των: abbreviation stroke of parent disregarded.
[εξη]λειφησαν for εξηλειφθησαν: omission of letter due to ignorant pronunciation; see Intro.

- VIII, 1 (12 a, 31) om [και παντων των ερπετων] = D E Arm Boh.
- 2 (12 a, 35) επεκαλυφθησαν = all MSS except A 32 58 75 121 135 Eth.
- 4 (12 b, 2) [εν τω εβδομω μ]ηνη = 15 19 44 52 53 54 56 57 61 72 106 129 130 314 344 426 etc.
- 5 (12 b, 4) om πορευομενον = 15 19 44 54 55* 58 61 82* 106 108 129 314 426 Sah Pales.
- 6 (12 b, 9) [ημερας] + [και τεσσερακο]ντα νυκ[τας] = Sah.
- 7 (12 b, 12) om [του ιδειν ει κεκοπακεν το υδαρ] = 58 Arm Phil; obelized by Syr-Hex.
- 8 (12 b, 16) A repetition of ει κεκοπακεν has been assumed, in order to fill the lines, but it is made more doubtful by the fact that line 18 has been erased and the text was complete without it. Line 17 is too long.
- 9 (12 b, 19) [ανεστρεψεν] = A 121; we should have printed υπεστρεψεν with all other MSS.
- 9 (12 b, 21) της γης; om [πασης] with related MSS.
- 9 (12 b, 22) [χει]ραν: see Intro.
om αυτου = 58 129 Arm Phil Chr.
- 9 (12 b, 23) om προς εαυτον = 83 Arab Vulg.
- 11 (12 b, 27) om [προς αυτον]: no support, but note transposition in 79.
- 13 (13 a, 2) [της] ζωης for εν τη ζωη: no support, but cf. gloss "vitae noe" in Vulg MSS.
[του πρωτου μηνος] = all MSS except A.
[μια του] μηνῶ: σ was represented by abbreviation stroke in parent MS. This phrase is omitted by the nearest relatives of 911.
- 13 (13 a, 3) + [προσωπου] before της γης: there is barely room to crowd in the word at the end of the line and it is found in the most nearly related MSS, L 15 19 44 53 54 55 57 58 59 61 72 82^a 106 107 108 130 134 135 314 344 426 Arm Eth Syr Chr etc.
- 13 (13 a, 4) επεκ[αλυψεν] for απεκαλυψεν; no support.
- 13 (13 a, 5) κει[βωτου] + [ην εποιη]σεν = all except A^a L 58 120 407 and a few. It is under an asterisk in Arm, while Rahlfs places the obelus.

- 14 (13 a, 8) Transpose $\tau[\omega \delta \epsilon] \nu \tau \epsilon[\rho \omega \mu \eta \nu \iota] = L 15 19 44 53$ 54 56 58 59 61 82 106 129 130 314 344 Chr etc.
- 14 (13 a, 9) + $\tau \omicron \upsilon$ before $\epsilon \iota \kappa[\alpha \delta \iota]$: no support.
- 16 (13 a, 12) The line seems four or five letters too long, but lines 3, 14, and 22 on this page are similarly uneven, so that it seems best to assign it to crowding or abbreviation, as no passable variants can be suggested from related MSS.
- 18 (13 a, 20) om $\kappa \alpha \iota \omicron \iota \upsilon \iota \omicron \alpha \nu \tau \omicron \upsilon$ = A* 75 Arm; note the transposition in 135 376; yet the omission is due to homoioteleuton and may not denote relationship.
- 19 (13 a, 23) ($\kappa \tau \eta \nu \eta$) + $\kappa \alpha \iota \pi[\alpha \nu \epsilon \rho \pi \epsilon \tau \omicron \nu \kappa \epsilon \iota \nu \omicron \upsilon] \mu \epsilon \nu \bar{\omicron}$: cf. 130 135 344 376, all of which have errors of substitution or conflation. The error in 911 arose from conflation with a MS, in which this phrase had been misplaced.
- 19 (13 a, 26) [$\epsilon \xi \eta \lambda \theta \omicron$] $\sigma \alpha \nu$ = A 75 82^a 121; plainly against the usual relatives of 911.
- 20 (13 a, 28) $\nu \omicron \epsilon$ for $\nu \omega \epsilon$: see Intro.
- 20 (13 a, 30) om $\kappa \alpha \iota \alpha \rho \omicron \nu \tau \omega \nu \tau \omega \nu \pi \epsilon \tau \epsilon \iota \nu \omega \nu \tau \omega \nu \kappa \alpha \theta \alpha \rho \omega \nu$ = 72 Boh Eth Pales Vulg²⁰. Omission is due to homoioteleuton.
- 21 (13 b, 2) $\kappa \alpha \iota$ for $\bar{\kappa} \bar{\varsigma} \omicron \bar{\theta} \bar{\varsigma}$: no explanation is possible for the errors here, as in the following $\delta \iota \alpha \nu \omicron \eta \theta \epsilon \iota \varsigma$ must be omitted with Vulg Goth Slav, $\epsilon \tau \iota$ omitted with little authority, $\tau \omicron \upsilon$ omitted with the authority of E and related minuscules, $\pi \rho \omicron \sigma \theta \omega$ read for $\pi \rho \omicron \sigma \theta \eta \sigma \omega$ with Origen and $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \rho \alpha \sigma \theta \alpha \iota$ for $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \rho \alpha \sigma \alpha \sigma \theta \alpha \iota$ with 19 314; yet even with this the line is several letters too long, though the following lines show that the scribe is here writing carefully and evenly.
- 21 (13 b, 4) $\epsilon \nu \kappa \epsilon \iota \tau \alpha \iota$: non-assimilation; see Intro.
- 21 (13 b, 7) om $\epsilon \tau \iota^2$ = 15 19 44 56 61 106 107 121 314 426 etc.
- IX, 2 (13 b, 18) [$\phi \omicron \beta \omicron \varsigma + \upsilon \mu \omega \nu$] = 15 19 44 56 57 106 108 130 134 135 344 Boh Pales Or Chr etc.
- 2 (13 b, 19) [$\tau \omicron \iota \varsigma \theta \eta \rho \iota \omicron \upsilon \varsigma \tau \eta \varsigma \gamma \eta \varsigma$] = A 15 19 44 61 72 82 121 129 134 135 314 426; no room for addition.
- 2 (13 b, 22) [$\epsilon \pi \iota \pi \alpha \nu \tau \alpha \varsigma$]: $\epsilon \pi \iota$ is omitted only by A 52 53 56 57 59 82 75 121 129. Space requires it here.

- 3 (13 b, 24) [δεδωκα]; restored with all except A 129 426.
- 3 (13 b, 26) υμο[ιυ] for υμιν: οι for ι is not noted elsewhere for this scribe, so the error may have come through a misreading of υμειν.
- 4 (13 b, 27) κλεας for κρεας: a scribal error; see Intro.
- 5 (13 b, 30) om των²: no support.
- 5 (13 b, 31) αυτω for αυτο: see Intro. for vowel interchange.
- 5 (13 b, 32) [α]δελφου = A D E M^{txt} 55 56^a 59 120 121 129 Phil; others add αυτου.
- 8 (14 a, 4) om [μετ αυτου] = 56^a 75 129 with H. and P. 25 32 68 128 Copt Goth.

- 15 (14 a, 30) (σαρκι) + [η εσ]τιν επι της γης: the scribe jumped to σαρκι in verse 16, but discovered his error after writing one sentence and deleted it before going on.
- 15 (14 a, 32) παπα[σαν]: the error arose by dittography of πα, but the scribe at once corrected to απασαν, for which there is no support. There was either trouble in the parent MS or our scribe shows more knowledge of Greek than he is supposed to possess.
- 16 (14 a, 35) α μεσον for ανα μεσον²: recurring phrases are especially subject to abbreviation in business cursive, so this may have arisen from an abbreviation stroke of the parent MS; see Intro.

- 22 (14 b, 14) The regular text has some 30 letters too many for this lacuna. We have omitted του πατρος αυτου, without authority, εξελθων, which is obelized by Syrfew. It may be that a line of the parent MS was omitted, as the lines are here running a little less than 30 letters.

doubtful because of the unevenness in length, yet parallels can be found for the differing lengths on this

2 (24, 17) πληθυνων for πληθυνω: circumflex accent read as abbreviation stroke.

3 (24, 18) om [αυτου] = 44 61 106 107 Vulg Phil; prefix asterisk, Arm.

5 (24, 19) κλησεται for κληθησεται: no support.

5 (24, 20) αλλα for αλλ: no support.

Transpose [τ]ο ου[ο]μα σου αβρααμ' = all except A.

6 (24, 21) αυξαν̄: the stroke above is surely an accent here.

σφοδρᾱ β: the β was deleted by the scribe, because he did not know that it was the sign for a second σφοδρα; the parent MS supported the common reading against A 44 54 121 135 Phil Arm.

7 (24, 22) θησον for στησω: no support, but it is a scribal error for θησω of 44 54 59 61 71 106 107 121 376 Eth.

εκ[ξελ]ευσονται: or read σ for ξ; sound error.

- 7 (24, 23) om *ανα μεσον*² = 44 Vulg Or^{lat}.

- 7 (24, 24) τω σπερμ[ατι] for *του σπερματος*² = 15 Arm Boh.
- 8 (24, 25) om και δωσω σοι και τω σπερματι σου μετα σε = 106; omission due to homoioteleuton, but probably in the parent ms.
παρω[κει]ς for παροιεις: no support.
- 9, 10 (24, 27, 28) [διατηρ]ησει for διατηρησεις: omission of abbreviation stroke.
- 10 (24, 29) Probably omit σου: note line fillers after σπερματος; no support.
- 13-15 (25, 1-7) These lines are too fragmentary to be restored with any degree of certainty, but the current text agrees well with the necessary length of line, except that περιτομη — αργυρωνητος has to be omitted with Eth in verse 13; cf. also 19 53 314. In 15 και ειπεν is read against ειπεν δε of A 53 56 75 121 129. The space also favors inserting [κς] before [ο θς] in the same line, though the addition is supported by 19 and 61 only. Cf. Old-Lat dominus, which indicates that this is a conflate reading.
- 16 (25, 10) αυτην for αυτον = 72. [εθν]ω for εθνων.
[α]υτης for αυτου = 72 Eth Phil.

εγεννηθησεται for γενησεται: cf. γεννηθησεται in 52 56 61 and some later mss.
om υιος = 15 55 59 72 82 120 130* 134 135 344 376 407 Boh Phil.
εις for ει: error came from following sigma.
- 17-18 (25, 11-13) αβραμ for αβρααμ: so spelled twice here and rarely later, as in some Latin mss. Here it is corrected by the same hand.
- 18 (25, 14) ουτως for ουτος: vowel interchange; see Intro.
- 19 (25, 14) τω αβραμ for προς αβρααμ = M 15 52 53 55 56 57 59 61 82 121 129 130 318 426 Phil etc.

- 19 (25, 15) γαρρα for σαρρα: note frequent interchange of gamma and sigma.
- 19 (25, 16) εισακ for ισαακ: no support, yet it is the invariable spelling in 911 and is so restored in all lacunae.
- 20 (25, 18) ιδου for και¹ = all MSS except A 44 53 Arm Eth Hil and a few that conflate.
 αυξησω for αυξανω = 55 59 120 130 344 407 Phil Chr.
- 20 (25, 20) τω εν corr τωσω for δωσω: at first the scribe started to write τω ενιαυτω of the next line; the correction involves a sound error, τ for δ, which seems to have been present in the parent MS.
- 21 (25, 21) τοξεται for τεξεται: scribal error.
- 23 (25, 23) om και ελαβεν αβρααμ: omission due to homoioteleuton.
 ισμαμα for ισμαηλ: scribal error, cursive influence.
- 23 (25, 24) αρσην for αρσεν: probably a sound error as there is barely room for [παν] in the lacuna.
- 23 (25, 25) και + και: dittography.
- 27 (26, 1) The line is much too long; perhaps omit και παντες οι with 82. The next nine lines are also very uncertain, though the length of lines is quite regular.
- XVIII, 5 (26, 10) [τα]ντα for τουτο = 52 57 Boh Sah T-A and several MSS cited by Holmes and Parsons.

- 5 (26, 11) [ει]παν for ειπεν = D M 15 55 82 120 135 407 426 Arm Boh Sah Chr Spec etc.
 καθ: doubtless abbreviation stroke omitted for καθα = all except A 52 72 121 376 Cyr T-A and few (καθως).
- 6 (26, 13) φυλα[σον] for φυρασον: interchange of liquids.
 σιμι[δαλεως] for σεμιδαλεως: interchange of ε and ι is rare in the papyrus.
 ενκρ[v]φι[ας]: non-assimilation.
- 7-8 (26, 14) om μοσχαριον to μοσχαριον ο because of homoioteleuton.
- 8 (26, 15) εφαγοσαν = A 121*; Holmes and Parsons cite 15 82, but Brooke and McLean omit.

- 9 (26, 17) σκνηνη for εν τη σκηνη: false insertion of ν not noticed when the scribe corrected to εγ σκνηνη: no support for omission of article or for assimilation.
- 10 (26, 19) τ[ης] κηνης for της σκηνης: the missing σ can stand in the lacuna with false division at the line end. ουσας for ουσα; influence of preceding words.
- 11 (26, 19) om πρεσβυτεροι = 19 108 314 Chr.
- 11 (26, 20) + δε before εξελιπεν δε: anticipation of following δε.
- 12 (26, 21) με for μεν: omission of abbreviation stroke. om μου: no support.
- 13 (26, 22) + τι before ο[τι]: scribal error having some connection with following οτι.
- 14 (26, 23) θ̄υ for τω θ̄ω = 15 55 376 426 Phil; for the correction κ̄υ there is no support. One is tempted to read κ̄ω with 19 108 314 as the original writing and Schmidt supports in final revision of text.
- 14 (26, 24) [σ]̄ε: stroke above is for a grave accent. εωρας for ωρας: ε arose from preceding σ. om εσται: no support, though Just transposes. της σαρρας for τη σαρρα: no support.
- 15 (26, 25) σσαρρα: dittography.
- 15 (26, 26) γελασας for εγελασας: probably a grammatical error, the epsilon being considered an augment.
- 16 (26, 26) καταβλεψαν for κατεβλεψαν: scribal error due to cursive influence; καταβλεψαν[τες] might be read as the papyrus is broken away at the end of the line, but the retention of the conjunction after the following αβρααμ has seemed decisive.
- 17 (26, 29) λ εγω for α εγω: scribal error.
- 18 (26, 30) εθν̄η: stroke indicates lack of accent; see Intro.
- 23 (27, 3) [α]δικος for ασεβης = 56 129.
- 24 (27, 3) [εαν + δε]: space seems to require the conjunction, found only in 135. om πεντηκοντα to πεντηκοντα: due to homoioteleuton.
- 25 (27, 4) [ως τ]ο: thus restored to fit space, though ως is omitted by E M 19 44 53 54 55 56 57 61 82 106 129 130 134 314 344 426 Arm Boh Eth etc.

- 31 (27, 16) λαησαι for λαλησαι: scribal error.
- 31 (27, 17) εαν ευρω εκει for ενεκεν των = 19 314 and perhaps some others as it stands in the text of Holmes and Parsons.
- 32 (27, 18) om [και ειπεν]: no support.
 [ουκ απ]ολω for ουμη απολεσω: the negative is supported by E M 15 52 56 57 82 120 129 130 134 135 344 and a few. The contracted future is found in 120 121^b 344 407 for verse 29 but not here.
- XIX, 1 (27, 21) πυλι for πυλην: itacism and omission of abbreviation stroke.
 [εξα]νεστη for ανεστη = all except A 19 108 131 314.
συναστησι for συνανησιω: false expansion of abbreviation stroke of parent MS; see Intro.
- 2 (27, 22) εκκλενατε for εκκλινατε: interchange of ε and ι is rare in 911.
εις for προς = all except A.
- 2 (27, 23) κα[ταλυσεσ]θε και νηφισθε for καταλυσατε και νηφατε: no support; καταλυσασθε is read in Theodoret and νηφασθε in all except A 72 120 121 407. The error in 911 is probably due to interchange of ε for α, a confusion arising from cursive ancestor, though translation influence is possible.
- 2 (27, 24) αλλ for αλλ' η = all except A 120 134 and a few that read αλλα.
- 2 (27, 25) κ[α]ταλυζομεν for καταλυσομεν: sound error.
- 3 (27, 25) κ[ατεβια]ζετο for παρεβιαζετο = most MSS except A (E 19 44 54 314).

- 4 (27, 28) σοδομειδ for σοδομειται: omission of abbreviation stroke and sound error, δ for τ; corr man 1. πε[ριεκυκλωσαν] σας: strange error; the space in the lacuna is right for the verb form supported by all mss. Many of the restorations on pages 28 to 37 are doubtful. So far as possible the lines have been preserved at normal or at least possible lengths.

 14 (33, 6) [ορει + τουτω] = 20 53 75 Arm Boh Sah.
- XXIII, 6 (34, 2) του for σου²: scribal error, cursive influence.
 9 (34, 6) [μερι] for μεριδι = all except A 121.
 10 (34, 8) om μεσω: no support, but cf. Hebrew.
 πρῶ + προς: dittography, but probably due to gloss in parent interpreting unusual abbreviation.
 10 (34, 9) om ειπεν: no support but cf. transposition in 106 and several other MSS.
 [τω]ν εκπορευομενων for των εισπορευομενων: dittography and scribal error due to crowded writing.
 10 (34, 10) om εις: accommodation to previous error, which should therefore be referred to the parent MS.
 11 (34, 10) μοι for μου: grammatical error.
 11 (34, 11) τονν ακρον for τον αγρον: dittography and sound error.
 [διδ]ωμ for διδωμι: omission of abbreviation stroke.
 11 (34, 12) + [παν]των before τῶ πολιτων = all except A 75 121 318 and few.
- XXIV, 7 (35, 8) [εγεννηθην] with all except A S 55 129* 135
 Chr (75 121).
 7 (35, 10) (εμπροσθεν σου) + και ευοδωσεις την οδον σου = 53 56 129 Chr, except for final σ of ευοδωσεις, which came from a non-accent stroke read as abbreviation.

- 20 (36, 1) om $\kappa\alpha\iota^3$: no support.

 om ευθυσ = Vulg; cf. D Chr.
ωμω for ωμων: omission of abbreviation stroke.
- 46 (38, 14) om επι τον βραχιονα = D S 15 19 53 82 120 130 135 314 344 407 426 and the following which support 911 in omitting αυτης: U₄ 44 52 54 57 75 106 107 376 Arm Eth Chr etc.
- 46 (38, 15) [επιον] + και τας κ[αμηλους σου π]οτιω και επιον: no support; a repetition of preceding sentence.
- 47 (38, 16) Transpose θυγατηρ τινος = all except A 19 108.
- 47 (38, 17) om εγω = D M 15 53 55 56 59 72 82 121 129 130 134 135 344 407 426 etc.
ειπ[εν] for εφη = 19 44 53 56 59 72 75 106 107 108 121 129 130 134 314 344 etc.
- 47 (38, 18) εδεκε for ετεκεν: sound error.
- 47 (38, 19) [π]ερι for επι = all except A 55 59 72 75 121 376.
- 48 (38, 19) προσεκενησα for προσεκυνησα: to be read προσεκε(υ)νησα; sound error.
τω κω: only A D 55* 72 120 121 407 omit the article.
- 48 (38, 20) μοι = A D 59 75 121; all others με.
- 48 (38, 21) τω κυ for του κυ: an error made possible by the use of the abbreviation κυ = κω, which the scribe doubtless intended to write here.
- 49 (38, 22) Transpose ελε[ος υμεις]: no support, but cf. Eth Chr, which omit υμεις.
- 49 (38, 23) [αγγει]λατε for *απαγγειλατε*¹: no support; perhaps abbreviation sign was used for two letters.
αυ[αγγειλατε] for *απαγγειλατε*² = 53 56.
επιστρεφω for επιστρεψω: scribal error.
οις for εις: scribal error, cursive influence.
- 51 (38, 26) απελθ[ε] for αποτρεχε = 53 56 129.
- 52 (39, 1) [τ]ω κω: only A 57 72 121 376 407 omit the article.

- 54 (39, 4) + το (πρωι) = 314 426; cf. τω in 15 19 53 56 129 376 Chr.
 εκμεψα[τε] for εκπεμψατε: sound error, and likeness of cursive π and μ; cf. correction in verse 56 below.
- 55 (39, 5) om και η μητηρ: omission may be due to homoioteleuton, as some MSS read μητηρ αυτης.
- 56 (39, 6) και ειπε[ν] for ο δε ειπεν = Goth; cf. 53 56 129 ειπεν δε.
- 57 (39, 8) ει δε ειπαν δε: reading doubtful, but there seems a scribal error from cursive influence and another by conflation; cf. ειπαν δε of 19 75 108 314 and ειπον δε of 44 106 107.
 [ερωτησωμεν] for επερωτησωμεν = all except A D 121 134.
- 58 (39, 10) και³ = A Eth; all others η δε.
- 59 (39, 10) [την ρεβ]εκκααν = 19 314 (την ρεβεκκαν); all others omit article.
- 60 (39, 13) εκεινου for ει γινου: sound error.
 [μυρια]δαας for μυριαδων: scribal error due to cursive original with abbreviation stroke.
- 61 (39, 15) εβραι for αβραι: scribal error, cursive influence.
- 62 (39, 18) τῆ for τη²: not an abbreviation stroke but stands for circumflex accent; however cf. της in 130 376.
- 63 (39, 18) αδελεσχησαι for αδολεσχησαι: scribal error, cursive influence.
- 63 (39, 19) τοις οφθαλμοις for τοις οφθαλμοις: seemingly only a scribal error. Cf. line 20.
- 65 (39, 22) Transpose εκεινος ανθρωπος: no support except Vulg, but 44 Arm omit εκεινος. Note that the article is omitted as in 72.
- 65 (39, 23) τ[ο]υ[τος] for ουτος: a grammatical error.
 om [εστιν] = 19 314 Phil.
- 65 (39, 24) περιεβαλλετο prim scr = 53 54 72 Chr;
 corr περιεβαλετο with all others. One of the rare instances where the corrections show variant readings in the parent MS.

- 66 (39, 24) om τα = 79; careless omission in both.
- XXV, 2 (39, 28) [ελαβε δε και ετεκεν] for ετεκεν δε = 19.
- 2 (39, 29) [ζ]εμραν for ζεβραν = 426 Arm; most MSS have ζεμβραν.
[μαδαν] for μαδαιμ = D E M and most minuscules.
om [και τον μαδιαμ] = Eth; omission due to similar name preceding.
- 3 (39, 31) [ασσουριεμ] for ασουριμ = most MSS against A 121.
- 4 (40, 1) ε[ν]ως for ενωχ: strange scribal error.
- 6 (40, 3) του αβρααμ for *αυτου*¹ = 76 134 Boh.
- 7 (40, 5) εδη for ετη: sound error.
- 9 (40, 8) om δυο = D 15 19 44 55 56 59 72 75 82 106 129 135 314 376 426 Arm Sah Eth etc.

om αυτου: no support.
- 11 (40, 12) [τον α]βρααμ: only 106 has the article.
- 11 (40, 13) φρεα for φρεαρ: omission of abbreviation stroke.
- 12 (40, 14) + των υιων before ισ[μαηλ]: no support.
- 13 (40, 15) κατα for κατ': cf. κατα το ονομα of 44 53 106 107 134 etc.
- 13 (40, 16) om *των*²: no support.
ναιβαιωθ' for ναβαιωθ: probably sound error from following syllable, or non-accent mark read as an abbreviation.
- 13 (40, 17) ναβαδεηλ' for ναβδεηλ: perhaps a non-accent stroke treated as abbreviation sign.
- 14 (40, 17) μαωση for μασση: no support; scribal error.
- 15 (40, 17) χοδδ[ᾱ]: against χολδαδ of 19 57 59 75 134 318 381 Eth Boh.

- 15 (40, 18) ιεγουρ for ιετουρ: no support; common scribal error.
- 17 (40, 20) εθνη for ετη: no support; false aspiration; error was corrected by the scribe.
- 17 (40, 21) om *ετη*² = 31 53 72 75 Hier.
ενκλιπ̄ω for εκλειπων: breathing or non-accent stroke read as abbreviation.
απαθενων for απεθανεν: scribal error involving metathesis.
- 18 (40, 22) ευπλατ' for ευειλατ: scribal error, cursive influence.
σο[υρ] for σουηλ of A alone.
- 20 (40, 26) ρεβεκκαη for ρεβεκκαν: scribal error, cursive influence.
την θυγατε[ρ]α: no other support for the article.

ας for εν: both cursive writing and misinterpretation of abbreviation stroke involved.
- 22 (40, 30) και ειπεν for ειπεν δε: no support; translation influence.
- 24 (41, 3) om *και*¹ = Goth; cf. Vulg.
- 24 (41, 4) κοιλια for γαστρι = D E M 15 19 52 53 54 55 56 57^{ms} 59 72 82 107 120 129 130 134 135 314 344^{ms} 407 426 etc.
- 25 (41, 4) εξεληθ[υ] for εξηλθεν: interchange of vowels.
- 25 (41, 5) σο δορα for δορα: if this is scribal error for το δορα, it is a mistake in gender. Both letters were crossed out by the first hand.
δασυ δασυς for δασυς: again dittography, but this may have been intentional for emphasis after the Hebrew fashion.
- 26 (41, 8) ηνικα for οτε: no support; translation influence.

- ετεκεν for εγενησεν = all except A Chr.
- 27 (4I, 8) [ην ησαυ]: verb restored with related MSS though the line seems rather long.

εγ γαστρι: assimilation, against practice of 911.
- 41 (52, 26) εν ταςς ληννοι for εν ταις ληνοις: misinterpretation of one abbreviation stroke and omission of another.
- 41 (52, 27) τους ενκισσησαι: single consonant for double, and misinterpretation of circumflex over article.
- 42 (52, 27) δ αν for γαρ = most MSS except A E* 44 58 106 134.
ετεκα for ετεκον: the scribe made two attempts to correct this form. The parent manuscript may have been illegible or he may have wished an Alexandrian form. In either case he shows little knowledge of Greek.
- 42 (52, 29) τω ιακωβ̄ for του ιακωβ = E 59.
- 43 (52, 30) αυτων for αυτω: circumflex read as abbreviation stroke.
κτηνα for κτηνη: grammatical error, but caused by ending of following adjective.
- XXXI, 1 (53, 2) π[αντα τα + προβατα]: there is no support for this addition, but the space in the lacuna requires some seven letters extra.

(*υμων*¹) + δοτε αυτω γυναικα επιγαμβρευσασθαι [η]μιν τας θυγα υμων: dittography of previous sentence, but δοτε correct and αυτην omitted; θυγα for θυγα- τερας looks like omitted abbreviation stroke, but is spelled out correctly in the first writing of the passage. Perhaps the repetition was already in the parent MS.
- 9 (59, 25) (*υμιν*²) + γυναικας: a misplaced correction;
cf. (υμων)¹ + εις γυναικας in 53 54^b 55 59 75 106 107

δησετε for δωσετε: δεω meaning to bind is a possible word to use of marriage, but one can not say whether it came in here as a gloss or as a translation variant.
om εις: no support except Vulg, but cf. omission of εις γυναικα in 106 and the change of verb above.
- 13 (60, 5) εμεαναν: expand abbreviation εμε(ι)αναν; it is an itacism.
τειναν for δειναν: sound error.

Mich. Pap. 2724, a fourth century fragment of a parchment leaf, written on both sides.

Genesis, chapter XIII :

- 7 [ε]
 [γέ]νετο μαχη [ανα μεσον] των ποιμενων τω[ν κτη] νων του αβραμ και ανα [με] σον των ποιμεν[ω]ν των κτηνων του λωτ οι δε χα ναναιοι και οι φερεζαιοι τοτε κατακουν τ[ην γην]
 8 ει[πεν]
 10 [. . . ιορδαν]ου οτι πασ[α]
 [ποτ]ιζομενη ην προ του
 [κα]ταστρεψαι τον θν σ[ο] δομ[α κα]ι γομορρα ως ο πα ραδεισος του θν και ως η
 γη αιγυπτου εως αν ελ
 [θη εις] ζογορα και εξελε
 [ξατο εαυτω λωτ πασαν τ]η

There are no important variants in verse 7, though the fragment avoids changes of 44-106 and of 19-314 once each. In verse 10 the transposition [ποτ]ιζομενη ην is supported by 19 314 Arm only; there is a lacuna in 911. The only other variant is εως αν ελ[θη] for εως ελθειν, which is supported by 15 82 911. Though the last two letters are in lacuna the reading is certain for there is not space for four letters. The fragment is written carefully with letters evenly spaced. The variant found in 72 376, εως αν ελθειν, is probably a conflate of the common text with this old variant.

A NEW SERIES

Great English Churchmen

EDITED BY SIDNEY DARK

“The intention of this series of studies of the lives of English churchmen is to suggest the significance of the man in the age in which he lived and in the movements within the Church with which he was concerned. It is the general editorial policy to select a biographer sympathetic with the character with whom he deals since, in the view of the editor, sympathy is necessary to understanding. Each volume is individual, and the writer alone is responsible for its judgments.”

New Books on Religion

CHRISTIANITY

This book is an endeavor to describe and account for the formation, successive modifications, and final destruction not of dogmatic assertions of religions in general, but of one particular religion, studied as a concrete reality. It is history and tries to delineate the main outlines of Christianity so as to prove that a religion not only in its dogmas, but also throughout the ramification of its whole organism, undergoes the process of evolution.

By CHARLES GUIGNEBERT.

THE WRESTLE OF RELIGION WITH TRUTH

Perhaps the most attractive feature of this rather original "philosophy of religion" is the transparent sincerity shown by Dr. Wieman in his courageous refusal of any kind of slipshod argument that might make his case appear more plausible. It is one of the most stimulating pieces of work done by an American in this field.

By HENRY NELSON WIEMAN.

NEW STUDIES IN MYSTICAL RELIGION

It is twenty years since the author of these "Studies" wrote "Studies in Mystical Religion." These two decades have been marked by a great increase of interest in this type of religion and a good deal of progress has been made in the interpretation of its nature and value. The book has the full fruits of learning and scholarship and will appeal to those who are interested in the verities and realities of vital religion.

By RUFUS M. JONES.

MORALS IN REVIEW

Quite apart from the encyclopedic sweep of its knowledge "Morals in Review" performs a great service to the serious student by reason of its approach to all these authors through personal study of the original sources. It never commits the mistake of reporting at second hand or of superimposing upon writers of pre-evolution days a modern scientific outlook for which there is no warrant in the original texts.

By A. K. ROGERS.

SECRETS OF EFFECTIVE LIVING

"Secrets of Effective Living" discusses some practical problems of everyday life, like fear, disappointment, and self-distrust, and suggests immediate and concrete ways which ordinary people can use to advantage in coping with them. The illustrations are drawn from actual instances in the author's experience as minister in a large city parish, and as preacher to a radio congregation covering all New England.

By JAMES GORDON GILKEY.

UNDERSTANDING THE APOSTLES' CREED

Of the many creeds which have played their part in the history of the Christian Church, none appears to have appealed to Catholic and Protestant, sectarian and universalist like the Apostles' Creed. After thus supplying the Apostles' Creed with a particularly well designated historical frame or setting, Dr. McFayden undertakes to extract its elements of permanent value to narrate the history of the difficulties experienced by science in dealing with the Church.

By DONALD McFAYDEN.

THE HISTORICAL LIFE OF CHRIST

This remarkable book is distinguished by two qualities rarely found side by side. The author has made the contributions of Albert Schweitzer and others his own by combining them all in a process of investigation which shows perfect mastery of the historic method. It is a combination of scientific objectivity and exceptional gift for dramatic presentation that will place this book among the classics of theology.
